THE ENTERPRISE.

OREGON CITY, OREGON, JULY 25, 1873.

THEY ARE COMING.

BY SAM BOOTH.

They are coming, they are coming,
Every week a thousand more,
From the crowded towns of Asia,
And the great Mongolian shore.
They leave their homes and fatherland,
With all that make them dear,
For better pay and better fare,
That wait the toilers here.
They leave their wives behind them,
Their hopes are all before,
They are coming, they are coming,
Every week a thousand more.

Beyond the great Pacific,
Where the ocean meets the sky,
Four hundred million Chinamen
Your vision may descry.
And every China steamship
That comes sailing up the bay,
Is filled to overflowing with
The children of Cathay.
And a thousand welcomes wait them
From their brethren on the shore;
They are coming, they are coming,
Every week a thousand more.

They are swarming in the cities,
They are crowding in the mines,
And they toil from morn till evening
Where a half a dollar shines.
They are weaving cloth and blankets,
They are making shirts and shoes,
And the tools of many a handicraft
They're learning how to use.
They wash our clothes, they make cigars
They're keeping or buy a store;
They are coming, they are coming,
Every week a thousand more.

They are cooking in the kitchen,
To poor Bridget's sore distress;
They are working on the railroads
For about six bits a day.
They are minding little babies,
They are delving in the sod,
And building shanties for themselves
And temples for their god.
They are peddling fruit and vegetables
Round from door to door,—
They are coming, they are coming,
Every week a thousand more.

They are bringing plague and pestilence
In fever-laden ships,
And taking gold and silver back
On their returning trips.
They are bringing hordes of prostitutes
To ply their trade of shame,
And breeding vice and foul disease
Too horrid to name.
In fetid lanes and alleys
They are like a festering sore,
They are coming, they are coming,
Every week a thousand more.

They are traveling on our valleys,
Singly and in dusky files,
In stages, cars, and even on foot,
The long and lanky miles.
From Great Salt Lake to Frisco,—
From La Paz to Puget Sound,
There's not a camp nor settlement
Where "John" may not be found.
A hundred thousand Chinamen
Have come this way before,—
They are coming, COMING, COMING,
Every week, a thousand more.

Farmers Platform.

The following platform of the farmers of Coffee county, shows that they see the situation and know what to do:

That we believe these hard times that are now upon us are susceptible of a permanent and radical cure, and that while there are many palliatives that can, and ought to be, applied, yet we regard the radical and sovereign remedy to consist in the encouragement of a sufficient number of manufactured articles and commodities which we farmers need, must have, and now are compelled to obtain from the east, with the heavy added tax of transportation, and the exhorbitant profits of middlemen to the first cost, which we consumers pay, while our productions are shipped to the hands and operatives of those Eastern establishments at a heavy cost which they in turn have to pay, a system of things sufficient within itself to almost ruin both parties; whereas, we farmers of the West cannot take our farms and go East to locate near the manufacturer, therefore, if possible, we should endeavor to induce the manufacturer to locate with us, thus furnishing a home market for both parties, in which the exchange can frequently be made without money, and always without the exhorbitant transportation tariffs, when the producer and consumer are brought together.

HIS MEASURE.—Every now and then we find in radical exchanges commendatory notices of George H. Williams and his wonderful ability. To those of us who know George well, and know him to be a dull stupid man, these laudatory notices are in the last degree nauseating. Occasionally we get hold of a radical paper that is edited with ability and has some regard for truth, and in papers of this kind the Oregon lawyer figures decidedly small. Take the following as a specimen:

In the Credit Mobilier suit there can be no doubt that the defendants will make a vigorous fight, and that they will avail themselves of the counsel of the most eminent lawyers to be had in the United States. Under these circumstances it is unfortunate for the prosecution that the Government is represented by an Attorney General who is more noted for obsequiousness to the personal will of the Executive than for the extent of his legal acquirements or for special ability of any kind. The President's plan of filling Cabinet offices with little people may enable to feel more at ease among his constitutional advisers; but its effect on public interests is every way bad.

Don't Do It.

Dont' invest all your money in lottery tickets. Give somebody else a chance to draw a prize.

Dont' whittle pine boxes for a living. It blisters ones hands so badly.

Don't loaf about the streets and depend on the Lord for your "daily bread." He isn't running a bakery.

Don't spend all your time watching your neighbors. Every man should be selfish enough to devote a few hours to his own business.

Don't try to make a reputation for bravery by "fighting the tiger." Any boy can throw chips.

Don't imagine that the Lord will call a first class preacher to a church paying a second class salary. He don't treat his servants so shabbily.

Don't measure a man by the length of his purse. Capt. Kidd was wealthy.

Don't disturb a hornet's nest. You will only receive a stinging rebuke for your pains.

Don't tell anybody else how to manage his business. Let the poor fool find it out himself.

A little girl sent out to hunt eggs came back unsuccessful, complaining that "lots of hens were standing round doing nothing."

Corporate Power.

It is a noteworthy fact that the Radical journals generally endeavor to discourage the farmer's movement, while the Democratic papers as generally regard it with favor. Instinctively the one party from the first frowned upon it, while the other endorsed it. This is easily accounted for. While the Radical party has always represented the combined wealth of the country, and found therein its support, the Democratic party represented the poor man and the laborer, the mechanic and the agriculturist, and rested thereupon its claims to the public favor. From its formation the Democratic organization has fought for the rights of labor, for the unrestricted freedom of the men whose sweat fertilized and enriched the country and developed its productive capacity. It has not warred against wealth, but against the tyranny of aggregated wealth. It has not made itself the propaganda of agrariaism, but the foe of plutocracy. It has not sought the destruction of capital, nor the demolition of the results of industry, but it has contended for the largest opportunity for the industrial, interest to avail itself of the fruits of its own toil. Thus it has always been found advocating reasonable hours of labor and the payment of just wages to the working man. It has never affected to despise the rich man because of his wealth, since to do so were not consistent with its friendship for the poor man, whose desire is to better his condition and become wealthy if he can; but it has striven to make labor so free and untrammeled as to render it possible for all men, by the exercise of industry and prudence, to achieve a competence.

This is the position of the Democratic party. Invoking no causeless antagonism between Capital and Labor, its purpose has been to make these two great powers of society pull together in kindness and unison; to bring about just relations between the employers and employed. This is why it has been ever the foe of special privileges. This is why it has always been found ranged against the monopolies. This is why it is found in sympathy with the agricultural class in their position in regard to tariffs, railroads, and so forth. Necessarily, then, the farmers must be allied with the Democracy. All the reforms that the Granges and kindred associations are seeking to encompass, have been sought by the Democratic party. Before that party lost power, the laboring interests, the farmers, and all who depended on individual exertion for their subsistence, had no cause of complaint; there were no burdensome restraints upon production; no delusive tariffs debilitating and destroying what they pretended to protect, ostensibly to exclude pauper labor, but really pauperizing our own laborers and creating a caste of enormously rich manufacturers. With the dominancy of the Radical-Republican party began the grievances which are now finding a choking expression in the farmer's movement in the West. These farmers must see that their interest is identical with the overthrow of the monopolists' party and the restoration of the Democracy.

All men who rely on their own labor must perceive that if they are to remain free, intelligent, and progressive, with the way clear to an advancement in life, to an improvement of fortune, they must give their earnest and undivided support where there is the best chance of securing their ends. The Radical-Republican party is in the hands of the corporations, of the organized wealth of the country, of the men who regard laborers now as their prototypes in feudal England regarded them. It is well enough to say, you cannot make serfs of the intelligent, cultivated men of America; but there are thousands of educated artisans and skilled mechanics in this land to-day who are virtually deprived of freedom of opinion, of expression, and of action.

It does not need a long essay to prove this. Let the reader reflect one moment on the condition of the vast numbers of railroad, steamship, and Government employes, who hold their bread-and-butter places on the tenure of homage, fealty, and entire subservience of soul and body to their masters. Need we go away from home, while we have within a short recollection the Mare Island ballot outrage, that sent Coghan to Congress and assisted Booth to the Governorship? Is not the interference of the Central Pacific Railway Company in politics notorious? and can it be denied that men are driven from the corporation workshops to the polls by the hundred to vote at the dictation of their employers, or suffer loss of the work that brings bread to their own mouths and the mouths of their wives and children? Now, this is a present fact. Have we much further to go to reach a condition when labor will be completely divested of freedom everywhere in the Union? Such a time may come.

The power of the corporations has grown so strong, that it is even now a herculan task to overcome it in any election. It permeates everywhere. It reaches every interest in the community. It imperils every man's business and prospects. It throttles the ambition and independence of every young man in the country who dare utter his convictions against it. It intimidates. It bribes. It subsidizes. It is destroying the manhood, the honor, the virtue of this Republic. It owns one party entirely. It is the only remaining principle of life in the Radical-Republican organism. It has but one foe—the Democratic party—and around that foe must gather all who are engaged in the farmers' movements—all who cherish the rights of labor—all who value personal independence, and individual liberty of speech and action—all, in fine, who desire the perpetuation of the ideas of American republicanism according to its first principles.—S. F. Examiner.

At one of the ragged schools in Ireland a clergyman asked the question, "What is holiness?' A pupil in dirty, tattered rags jumped up and said: "Plaze, yer riverence, it is to be clean inside."

"Don't you think," asked a conceited fiddler of a critic, "that I can play the violin like Paganini?" "Yes," said the critic, "or any other ninny."
