OREGON CITY, OREGON, FRIDAY, AUGUST 15, 1873.

THE DRUNKARD'S WIFE.

BY FRANCISS, SMITH,

I am dying, Willie, dying, Death's dew is on my brow Come closer-let me gaze on you, For you are sober now. Your eyes beem kindly on me-

I'm thinking of the happy time Ere you and I were wed, When daily blessings seemed to fall Like incluse on my head-When great joy filled my bosom, And my step was light and free, And you, a bright-eyed, fearless boy, Were all the world to me.

Oh, how I loved you, Willie! And I love y in, darling, yet,-Your kindness in that golden time I never can forget. And I do not mean to chide you, When a backward view I cast; And shudder at the gulf between The present and the past.

Forgive me, Willie, durling, If my words have caused you pain-I will not call up memories of the long ago again. But I must speak of the present, For I have that to say Which I would have you think of, When I am snatched away.

Our little boy, oh, Willie, He is pure and sinless now-There is no shade of crime or vice Upon his baby brow-His heart is free from bitterness-

His soul as pure as snow-Oh, Willie, in the years to come SEE THAT YOU KEEP HIM SO.

You have sworn upon the Bible That you ne'er again will taste The poison that has ruined us And made out lives a waste. If you keep that solemn covenant As long as life shull hast, Our boy is safe, and Gia will grant Forgiveness for the past. .
