DIED

Shall we meet our loved and lost one When the toils of life are o'er Will she clasp our hands in gladness On a brighter, better shore? Will her heart beat glad with rapture As we ne'er the further shores Will she joyfully out to meet us When we, too, have crossed the tide? Will she guide us to the portals Of the City on the hill ' Will she tell us in solt whispers, As of old, she loves us still? Will she calmly, gently lead us, By the rivers bright and fair-Where immortal glory cresteth Every brow that is welcomed there? While our thoughts are lost in wonder, Every breeze that treights the air Whispers in the mildest accents, Ye shall surely meet "up there"-Meet beyond the mystic river-Meet on yonder Purple Heights-Where the days of joys are laden, And where's known no shades of night. Cheer up, then, desponding mourner, Sailing o'er earth's billowing sea, For the goal is not far distant

Where the loved one waits for thee The Wear and Tear of Life.

The cares, anxieties and misfortunes of life have as much to do with shortening it as disease. They are in fact the source of many ailments and physical disabilities, Nervous weakness, dyspepsia, affections of the liver, disturbances of the bowels, headache, hypochondria and monomania are among these distressing fruits. It is, therefore, of great importance that persons whose minds are oppressed with heavy business responsibilities, or harassed by family troubles, or excited by speculation, or perplexed by a multiplicity of enterprises, or in any way overtaxed or I feel an interest in your effort to have a overworked, should keep up their stamina by the daily use of a wholesome tonic.
