A DRINKING SONG.

BY LONGFELLOW. Come, old friend, sit down and listen From the pitcher placed between us How the waters laugh and glisten In the head of old Silenus.

Old Silenus, bloated, drunken, Led by his inebriate satyrs; On his breast his head is sunken, Vacantly he leers and chatters.

Round about him fair Bacchantes, Rearing cymbals, flutes, and thyrses Wild from Naxian groves, or Zante's Vineyards, sing delirious verses.

Thus he won, through all the nations Bloodless victories, and the farmer Bore, as trophies and oblations, Vines for banners, plows for armor.

Much this mystic thong expresses:

Bacchus was the type of vigor, And Silenus of excesses. These are ancient ethnic revels Of a faith long since forsaken; Now the satyrs, changed to devils, Frighten mortals wine-o'ertaken.

Judged by no o'er-zealous rigor,

Now to rivulets from the mountains Point the rods of fortune-tellers; Youth perpetual dwells in fountains, Not in flasks, and kegs, and cellars Claudius, though he sang of flagons,

From that hery blood of dragons Never would his own replenish.

Even Redi, though he chaunted Baccaus in the Tuscan valleys, Never drank, the wine he vaunted In his dithyrambic sallies.

Then with water fill the pitcher, Wreathed about with classic fables Ne'er Talernian threw a richer Light upon Lucullus' tables.

Come, old friend, sit down and listen As it passes there between us, How its wavelets laugh and g Isten
