The New Connecticut Senator.

Washington Cor. Chicago Times,

General Hawley is rather proud of the fact that a Hartford man is to come to the Senate after all. His are only pleasant words when Eatou's name is montioned: "He was the most aggeeable opponent I ever had," said Hawley this morning.

"Where is he on finance?" he was asked.

"Just where you will find every most unsatisfactory, the most laboman Connecticut sends to Congress,' rious, the least appreciated, and the was the answer; " in favor of getting most difficult avocation that a man upon a cish basis as soon as practican follow is that of an editor. A solid-built man, well settled into his boots; Height medium; face goodnatured, but business in every line of it when he was engaged in debate. In general appearance and build he is nearer like Alexander Mitchell over there than any one I at present can call to mind.

"As I remember him in Connecticut, he was not one of your subdued sort of men?"

" No," answered Hawley, " and he won't be when he reaches the Senate. Eaton always fancied that he was hired by the people to work, and he is one of the steadlest men in attenand satirize them, while a larger class entirely ignore those newspadance upon his duties we ever had in Connecticut. Everything is real and earnest with him, and believes that he must do his share in all of scientific topics which the average measures of any importance.
