The Prohibitory Liquor Law.

From the Boston Gazette.

We at length reached the hotel again, and proposed a glass of brandy and water. My friend looked at me and then at the landlord; and then the landlord looked at my friend and then at me. Perplexity overspread the countenance of both.

"Such a thing as a drop of liquor is not to be had in the place," said the landlord.

"Bought, you mean," retorted my friend.

"Bought, I mean," was the answer.

Then both eyed me significantly.

"Does anybody give it away?" I inquired, greatly puzzled by the mystery that appeared on both their countenances.

"Not exactly. You see the State Constables would be after me in no time if I sold liquor," exclaimed the landlord. "Do you want some very badly?"

I could not explain how badly I wanted it, and could only give vent to my feelings in a sigh.

Without a word the landlord disappeared within th recesses of a small room behind the office desk, and presently came forth with two empty tumblers in his hand. These he placed on the desk.

"But where is the liquor?" I inquired.

"The law forbids me to sell it," he said. "I dare not disobey the law. If you can find any here you are welcome to it," saying which he accidentally turned back the breast of his coat. The neck of a bottle peeped forth from the inside pocket. He winked his eye at me, and I winked my eye at him, after which I drew forth the bottle. He faintly struggled with me to prevent the daring robbery upon which I was bent, but I proved inexorable.

"My private bottle kept for medicinal purposes, and not for sale," he moaned, as he poured out the liquor for myself and the worthy Chairman of the Parish Committee.

"Have some water gentlemen?" he added with alacrity.

We drank, I replaced the bottle in the repository whence I had taken it. Then I put a dollar in his hands.

"What is this for?" he asked, as he deposited it in his waistcoat pocket and gave me a half-dollar in change.

"For a bushel of oats," I answered. "Keep them until I send for them."

"Ah, sir," said the landlord, with an air of resignation, "the Prohibitory law has done a world of good in stopping the sale of liquors. It's a severe law on us, but it's a good one."

The New Boat.

The new mail boat that has been built by Mr. Z. F. Moody, started from the upper Cascades on last Tuesday evening, with her machinery working like a charm considering the hurried manner in which it had been put together. For fear the boat might not be able to reach here in time, Mr. Moody took the mails and proceeded down the river in a small boat, when some ten or fifteen miles from here he met the boat. He placed the mails aboard and she returned to the Cascades. When the mails arrived from Portland next day she again started for this city, and was coming along nicely and when opposite White Salmon a pin in the machinery got loose, which broke the cogs out of the main driving wheel to the propeller. The boat was immediately tied up to the bank, the mails were put on horses and brought to town; the broken wheel was taken out and placed in a small boat, and Mr. Moody, with a couple of oarsmen, started for the Cascades, there to take the boat for Portland. It is now expected that the boat will be ready to leave here this morning all right.

On Wednesday evening about two-thirds of our entire population was at the river bank with a band of music, and anvils for firing a salute, awaiting the arrival of the new steamboat, for the purpose of giving her a grand reception. But she failed to put in an appearance, and after waiting until late in the night, the crowd dispersed and went home. However, about 12 o'clock the band commenced to play and the anvils to boom, and we said to ourself as we awoke from our slumbers, "the new boat has come," and in a short time our little town was again alive, and on rushing out we found to our sorrow, that she had not yet arrived.

This demonstration plainly shows that the hearts of our people are with the new enterprise, and that they will give it all the encouragement within their power.

Mr. Dan French, who is interested with Mr. Moody in this enterprise, informs us that they have purchased the steamboat Otter, to run from Portland to the Lower Cascades. This boat has made regular trips, bringing the mails every day, since the commencement of the new contract, to the Cascades, from that point it has been carried on horses since Thursday.

The scedule time for carrying the mails from Portland to this place is forty-two hours, so that so far, Mr. Moody has not failed to get the mails here within the contract time.—Mountaineer.

How They Got Acquainted.—No particular intimacy appears to have existed between the President and Senator Jones of Nevada until it transpired that Jones owned a very lucrative silver mine. Meeting him shortly after this discovery, Grant embraced him with great ardor, at the same time exclaiming:

"Jones, my dear fellow, you must have noticed what an effort it has cost me to hide so long the esteem, the confidence, the friendship, the affection that has been resting in my bosom for you."

Jones flipped a new silver dollar into the air, recaptured it cleverly, and said:

"Grant, you're right—that mine's a big thing."

Would Scorn It.—A Southern journal issues the following notice: "Many people ask for papers at this office who would scorn to beg for five cents: yet that is the price charged for a copy. We hope they will see the point."

Improvements of the Willamette.

Only $35,000 Needed.

Capt. Smith, to whom we referred the other day as having explored the course of the Willamette river from Harrisburg down in the service of the Linn County Central Grange, has completed that tour of observation and seems to have come to the conclusion that the improvement of navigation to secure a depth of three and a half feet of water during the summer and autumn, need not be a task accompanied with extraordinary expense. Capt. Smith was selected for this survey on account of his experience in such work. He supervised the construction of the canal and locks at Oregon City, which must be regarded as a work of magnitude that was completed in the best manner.

We do not have complete data from him as to what his calculations based on, or how thorough his investigations were, but we learn from a gentleman with whom he conversed after reaching Portland, that he gave it as his opinion that the river from Corvallis down could be made available for transportation at all seasons by an outlay of thirty-five thousand dollars. This too, he named as an extreme sum, and entirely sufficiently to meet any requirements. This is not over half what has been usually named in that connection and places the enterprise entirely within the reach of the citizens of Oregon. The cities and towns, from Corvallis to Porland, have an immediate interest in the trade and commerce of the country that is dependent on the navigation of the Willamette river. Portland should contribute liberally, Salem, Albany, Corvallis and intermediate points should do their part, and the country should respond with liberal subscriptions, which can be easily secured through the organization of the Granges. It really does seem is if we were better able "to work out our own salvation," so far as river improvements are concerned, than to keep a starving watch for Congressional appropriations. Whatever sum may be by Congress appropriated for use the present summer, may be turned in to help the good work, but we are certainly able to push it through ourselves and realize benefits fully equivalent before next January.

It is important to carry improvements as far up as Harrisburg, and farther up if possible, but Corvallis would offer an outlet for a great part of the grain of Polk and Benton counties, and we shall do much by proving the feasibility of securing navigation so far. The question now is are we to put our hands in our pockets for the small sum needed, or must we wait the uncertainty of Government aid?—Record.

What an old Lady Says.—The Los Angeles Herald remarks, says the Examiner: That ladies say, and we never dispute a lady's word, that dram-drinking has reduced many families from competency to penury and want. We concede the fact, but there are one or two other follies that do much in the way of sending the household furniture to the auction-mart, and the family jewelry to the pawnbrokers' shop. An old lady who makes a dress of eight yards of cloth, and abominates furbelows and flounces, remarked within our hearing the other day, that the modern lady's passion for dress was quite as destructive of domestic happiness as men's visits to saloons. She also suggests that while women are engaged in reforming the men it would be quite as well if they would reform themselves, by reducing their number of visits to dry goods stores, millinery shops and jewelry establishments. Those places drive many men to drink who would never become drunkards if their wives were not spendthrifts. This is what an old lady says.

Different Kinds of Success.—The Courier-Journal, discussing of "journalism," says that it is, at large, but an abstract and brief chronicle of life, and the most successful newspapers are conducted upon the same principles which regulate the most successful lives. There are many kinds of successes in the world. One man sets out in quest of fame; another in quest of money; a third in quest of scientific or philanthropic achievement. The methods applicable to each are different. But every man who persues his bent is pretty sure to stand or fall by his own characteristics. It is by comprehending these and adapting them to one's condition and resources that results are obtained. Rarely will any man confine all the acquisitive faculties, the faculty of fame, wealth, usefulness. The famous man is often poor. It is the same with newspapers. The most brilliant of journalists have been unable to amass riches, whilst the most ordinary have grown enormously rich. Some have been popular without merit; others have had the misfortune to receive least credit when they were most deserving.

Warmed Up.—A Western orator, warming with his subject, exclaimed. "There is not a man, woman or child in this house, who has arrived at the age of fifty years, but has felt this truth thundering through their minds for centuries."

Poverty.—A few years since, at a celebration of our national anniversary, a poor peddler who was present, being called upon for a toast, offered the following: "Here is health to poverty; it sticks to a man when all his friends desert him."

Out of Patience.—An Illinoisian wrote to Horace Greely several times asking him what was good for catarrh and finally Horace got out of patience and replied: "Chop your d—d head off."

No Objection.—"Well, Bridget, if I engage you, I shall want you to stay at home whenever I shall wish to go out." "Well, ma'am, I have no objections, provided you do the same when I wish to go out."

Which?—A Vermont debating club is now struggling with the question, "Which eats the most chickens—ministers or owls?"

Not a Saloon.—Noble county, Ohio, has not a saloon, and the ladies want a small one opened so as to keep their hands in."

The Sweetest Thing.—A candid old bachelor says: "After all, a woman's heart is the sweetest thing in the world. It's a perfect honeycomb, full of sells."

Enough.—A lady being asked to waltz, gave the following sensible and appropriate answer: No, I thank you, sir; I have hugging enough at home."

Well Paved.—China has streets paved with granite blocks laid over three hundred years ago, and as good as new. The contractors are dead.

His Offer.—A Brockport (Pa.) parson, who, with Paul, believes that it is better to marry than burn, offers twenty cords of wood for a wife.
