exhibition, and Oregon, so rich in all the natural material that goes to make a people prosperous, happy and permanently blest, neglect this golden opportunity of advertising to the world the immense resources of her undeveloped wealth? In the several classifications of the coming Centennial Exhibition, department four comprises furniture and manufactures of general use in constructions and in dwellings. Group forty of this department consists of cabinet, drawingroom, parlor and chamber suits, office and library mantles, etc. Until recently it has duced any lumber fit for use in these departments, and almost all our fine furniture and ornamental cabinet work was imported or manufactured from material brought' from the East. But in this, as in all other natural resources, it is being demonstrated that our State cannot only in native ornomental and valuable finishing wood to any other part of the world. Perhaps this assertion will be deemed extravagant by some, but to such we would say: You have only to visit the office of Shindler & Lowenstein, of this city, to see specimens of cab inet work manufactured from the curl maple as well as a score of other ornamental wood of Oregon growth, superior in texture, density, varigated grain, and susceptible of receiving a higher finish than any mahogany, black walnut, rose or satin wood imported into the State. Wm. McAllister, of Philadelphia importer and manufacturer of fancy cases for parlor musical instruments. declared specimens of Oregon curl maple we presented him while in that city superior in every respect, for beauty of finish, to the celebrated ornamental wood from the black forests of Baden, which is imported at a cost of several hundred dollars per ton; and this opinion was expressed by the late J. Edgar Thompson relative to using Oregon curl maple for panel work in the manufacture of the Pulman palace car. If we still feel disposed to doubt the superiority of our Oregon finishing lumber we have only to visit the Palace hotel of San Francisco, where the best judgment and highest attainments in the art of construction has been employed without regard to cost or extravagant expenditure. to erect a building superior in beauty and elegance of finish to any hotel on the American continent; and there we shall find the doors, casings, wainscoting, floors, and panel-work, mostly manufactured from Oregon lumber shipped from our own wharves and cut at our mills. And shall we still hesitate and ask what can Oregon exhibit, while our forests abound with untold millions of timber, which, for finishing lumber and ship-building purposes.
