HEADED HIM OFF.

The Commercial Bulletin tells this story: "An insurance agent who had expended fifteen minutes of eloquent argument with a well known Boston business man was brought to a temporary pause by the latter's quietly opening a drawer in his desk and taking therefrom a skull upon which was inscribed: "All that is left of the last drummer that ealled," and placing it before him.

"A capital idea," remarked the drummer.

"Yes," said the merchant, "and we propose to add to our collection." "Very good," was the reply. "I shall be happy to aid you, and in case you take a risk in our office will agree to furnish you an inscription for the second skull."

"And what will that be?" inquired the merchant.

"All that was left of the man that was called on, except his insurance in the Bonanza Life Insurance Company."

How Curran Helped a Countryman to Recover His Money.

The following anecdote of Curran, the celebrated Irish orator, has but recently appeared: A farmer attending fair with a hundred pounds in his pocket, took the precaution of depositing it in the hands of the landlord of the public house at which he stopped, Having occasion for it shortly afterward, he resorted to mine host for payment. But the landlord, too deep for the country-man, wondered what he meant, and was quite sure no such sum had ever been lodged in his hands by the astonished rustic.
