Wanted a Little Help. One day last week a citizen was passing up Twelfth street a wild-eyed woman jumped out of a front door, halted him and excitedly said: "Come in here—come in for just a minute!"

"What's the matter?" he asked in reply, observing that her face was badly scratched, her clothing torn, and that her nose had been roughly knocked about.

"Come in—come in!" she whispered. "You've been fighting!" he said as he backed off.

At that moment a burly big man opened the door and called out: "Come in here, you old she-fiend! Come in and help me pound him!" urged the woman.

"Why, he could eat me up in a minute!" replied the citizen. "I'm no fighter, and I want no trouble." "I can almost lick him alone," she continued, as she followed him along the walk.

"If I had some one to hold his legs when I get him by the throat I could choke the grit all out of him in two minutes! Come and come in and help me!" she said, and a poor woman a lift.

The citizen wouldn't stop, and after following him nearly a block the woman turned back, saying: "If I can get in a good snifter on his nose I can lick him alone."—Free Press.

LEAS. PRECAUTIONS.—A timid young man was visiting a beautiful and accomplished young woman on Peoria street last night, when, after a pause, she said, looking at him closely: "Now, I want to propose to you—'You are very kind,' said the timid young man between gasps and blushes, 'but I am not worthy of so much happiness, and, in fact, none of our family are marrying people, besides my income is limited, and I have to meet Mr. Moody, and I'm afraid I'll be late.' Then, without waiting to put on his overcoat he tried to make his exit through the door of a cupboard.

"Why," said the young woman, lifting her eyebrows in surprise, "I wanted you to escort me to my sister's on Adams street."

"O, in that case," answered her swain, "if your head's level, and your foot's on the other foot, I shall be only too happy, but I was afraid—that is, I almost dared to hope—in fine, I am subject to these seizures, and he sat down on the coal-scuttle, and said it was a very cold day; had not such a cold weather since the Fourth of July."—Chicago Tribune.

"How are you getting along in your new place?" asked a lady of a girl whom she had recommended for a situation. "Why, well, thank you," answered the girl.
