The Uses of Ammonia.
Put a tea-spoonful of ammonia in a quart of warm soap-suds, dip a cloth in it and go over your solid paint and see how rapid the dirt will disappear; no scrubbing will be necessary. To a pint of hot suds add a tea-spoonful of the spirits, dip in your forks and spoon (or whatever you have to clean), rub with a soft brush and then finish with a chamiso skin. For washing windows and mirrors it has no equal. It will remove grease spots from every fabric without injuring the garment. Put on the ammonia nearly clear; lay blotting paper over, and set a hot iron on it for a moment. Also a few drops in water will cleanse and whiten faces and muslin beautifully. A few drops in a bowl of water, if the skin be oily, will remove all uncleanliness and disagreeable odors. Added to a hot-bath, it entirely absorbs all noxious smells, and nothing is better to remove dandruff from the hair. For cleaning brass, it will make them flourish. It is also good to clean paint jars. So be sure and keep a bottle of it in the house, and have a glass stopper, as it eats away corks.

To Give Girls a Graceful Bearing.
The Hindoo girls are graceful and exquisitely formed. From their earliest childhood, says Home and School, they are accustomed to carry burdens on their heads. The water for family use is always brought by the girls in earthen jars, carefully poised in this way. This exercise is said to strengthen the muscles of the back, while the chest is thrown forward. No crooked backs are seen in Hindoostan. Dr. Henry Spry, one of the company's medical officers, says that "this exercise of carrying small vessels of water on the head might be advantageously introduced into our boarding schools and private families, and that it might entirely supersede the present machinery of dumb-bells, back-bands, skipping-rope, etc. The young lady ought to be taught to carry the jar, as these Hindoo women do, without ever touching it with her hand." The same practice of carrying water leads to precisely the same results in the south of Spain and in the south of Italy as in the north. A Neapolitan female peasant will carry on the very head a vessel full of water to the river brim over a rough road and not spill a drop of it, and the acquisition of this art or knack gives her the same erect and elastic gait, and the same expansion of chest and well-formed back and shoulders.

IN A DILEMMA.—During the height of excitement in a certain church in the western part of the city one evening last week, says the Leavenworth Times, a little child about four years old was noticed to leave its mother, and in a noisy manner to perambulate the various aisles as if in search of some one. At last, giving a loud shout of "Oh, mamma, here's papa," rushed into the lap of a young unmarried gentleman, whose feelings, it is said, were presumed, can be better imagined than described, when it is known that the mother of the child is well known to those present as a dashing widow, to whom the young man for some time past has been paying considerable attention. He did not remain until the close of the sermon, at any rate, and for a while more laughter than tears agitated the congregation.

SCHEMCK AND THE RECENT TESTIMONY.—Gen. Schemck's most recent testimony respecting Emma Mine affairs reiterates his conviction that he has done nothing improper. If to convince Gen. Schemck upon this point was the object of taking so much superfluous evidence, it is quite clear that the labors of the committee have been thrown away. But on the question of the correctness of Mr. Lyon's testimony compared with that of Messrs. Schemck and Park, the exhibition of actual documents, as reported in the Washington dispatches, is singularly unfortunate for the ex-Minister.

WOMEN'S FEET.—A letter from an "Anatomist" to the Des Moines Register, says: "There is a great deal of nonsense talked about women's feet. It is not enough that a foot should be small; it must be beautifully proportioned as well. The instep must be finely arched, so that water could flow under it when placed naked upon the ground. The heel must be small and pink, the ankle firm, the nails rosy, and the toes proportioned as well. It must present no coxalities. When these requirements are present, the size is not of great importance, though a female foot should not weigh at the outside more than two and a half pounds."

FOR WHITENING THE HANDS.—A wine glass of Cologne and one of lemon juice strained clear. Scrape two cakes of brown Windsor soap to powder, and mix well in a mortar. When hard, it is fit for use, and will be found excellent for whitening the hands.

THE WEEKLY SUN.

1776. NEW YORK, 1876.

Eighteen hundred and seventy-six is the Centennial year. It is also the year in which an Opposition House of Representatives, the first since the war, will be in power at Washington; and the year of the twenty-third election of a President of the United States. All of these events are of great interest and importance, especially the two latter; and they are connected with the history of our country in a way which will be of great interest and importance to all who are interested in the progress of the Republic.
