The Two "Duckeys."

A Clevelard drummer (says the Leader) was in Elvria a few Sundays ago, and while sitting in his room heard, from the next room, the mysterious question and answer: "Whose duckey are you?"

"I'se your duckey!"

A few moments passed, during which the drummer sat in openmonthed wonder, and the silence was again broken:

"Whose duckey are you?" "I'se your duckey!"

Unable to stand it much longer alone the Clevelander hurried down to the office, learned that a newlymarried couple were in the house, invited three other drummers to here the fun, and tiptoed back to his room. The wicked quartet crammed Azalea, came bouncing into the room about 9:30 P. The table had been cleared of the substantials and orders for dessert had been given. At that moment a spirit of mischief took entire possession of the Clevelander, use of the Dean and Chapter of tal are to be carefully avoided, and Leaning across the table, he looked archly at his nearest friend, and in dulcet tones propounded the conundrum:

"Whose duckey are you?" The other chap was equal to the emergency, and in tones of affected sweetness got in his answer:

"I'se your duckey!" Two scarlet rustic faces, the flutter of a white dress through the doorway, two vacant seats at the table, and four crazy drummers laughing till the tears ran, flashed across the vision of the spectators as the curtain fell.
