Overbearing Grapevines.

Many varieties of grapevines are liable to overbear, especially when the soil is not rich, giving the roots a poor chance to extend, owing to its hardness; and in such cases, if a large quantity of fruit sets, it is best to remove a portion of it when very small. Take a pair of scissors in June, and clip out from one-third to what is left will ripen well and be worth double what the entire crop would be if left upon the vines.

There are many places where grape growing is not considered profitable, solely owing to an improper management of the vines. The soil being naturally not very fertile, and perhaps otherwise not adapted to growing in a careless way, the vines are generally set where the roots can not easily expand, perhaps by the side of a walk, in the grass or near a building where they are quite as badly situated, if the soil be stiff and clayey, and the result is that the vines set more fruit than the roots can sustain.

To obtain the largest possible quantity of well ripened grapes everywhere, the vines should grow where the soil is naturally rich, or has been made rich by manures, and spaded from twelve to fifteen inches deep, and kept free of weeds and grass. In such a soil the roots of the vines wili extend in all directions from eight to fifteen feet, and they will me one doz n bottles by express. This is to certify that I was discharged from the army with Chronic Diarrheea, and have been cured by Dr. Holloway's Pills. WILSON HARVEY, New York, April 7, 1866. 21 Pht St.

The following is an interesting case of a man employed in an Iron Foundry, who, in pouring melted iron into a flask that was damp and wet, caused an explosion. The melted iron was thrown around and on him in a perfect shower, and he was burned dreadfully. The following certifi-cate was given to me, by him, about eight weeks after the accident: New York, Jan. 11, 1866. My name is Jacob Hardy; I am an Iron ounder. I was badly burnt by hot iron in November last; my burns healed, but I had a running sore on my leg that would not heal. I tried Holloway's Ointment and it cured me in a few weeks.
