FALLS ENCAMPMENT, No. 4,

Across the woodland's pleasant reaches, And like a shower of gilded rain The leaves dropped from the golden beeches. Far down the shadowy aisles I heard An undertone of plaintive sighing,

Late October.

How peacefully the sunlight fell

Pregon

As if the waning Summer wept For all her glories dead and dying.

The golden-rod, with drooping plume, Has lost its aureole of gladness; The starless mullein by the road Dropped down its seeds like tears of sad Bess:

The far-off hill, veiled like a bride, Seemed wedded to the sky immortal, And through the sunset's golden gate

O peaceful hour, O faith renewed, That touched the fading earth with sweet-And lifted up my heart in thanks

For life's glad measure of completeness. Though dead leaves rustle at my feet, And all the fields are brown and sober, The heart may blossom with new hope Beneath the gray skies of October.

A Very Old Song.

"To-morrow, ma, I'm sweet sixteen, And Billy Grimes, the drover, Has popped the question to me, ma, And wants to be my lover; To-morrow mora, he says, mamma, He's coming here quite early. To take a pleasant walk with me, Across the field of barley."

"You must not go, my gentle dear, There's no use now a-talking; You shall not go across the field With Billy Grimes a-walking. To think of his presumption, too! The dirty, ugly drover-
