"Horse-Heaven."

The "Farmer" of the 9th inst. has the following letter from Mr. J. H. Lewellen, of Springwater:

As I have never seen any communication from this section of Clackamas county, I thought it might not be amiss to drop you these few lines in regard to our community and things generally. Springwater is a section of country almost unknown to a great many of your readers, it being better known by the significant title of "Horse Heaven." At first I will tell you where the place is situated, afterward in regard to its original name. It comprises a section of country near the foot of the Cascade range of mountains, bounded on the east by the Clackamas river, on the west by Clear creek, making a ridge between the two streams from the foot of the mountains to the junction of the two streams, a distance of about fifteen miles, varying in width from two to three miles, comprising some of the finest lands in this county, in which there are many good farms, the soil being dry and rather course, of a dark reddish color, and built on a good foundation of clay, with but few stone and no gravel, making it without a doubt one of the finest fruit countries in the world for all fruits with the exception of peaches and grapes. Also it produces the finest quality of fall wheat, which together with fruit is the principal business of the inhabitants, the apples being of a quality adapted to late shipments to the California markets, which always has been a paying business, and in the future I think will still improve. Among the fruit raising community we notice the fine orchards of Carroll Howell, H. Dubolse, L. A. Lacey, E. B. Lewellen, B. Tucker, and many others, whose orchards have been bearing for 18 and 20 years, and look as fresh and vigorous as they did 10 years ago. There are many young orchards being planted this winter, the principal parts being plums and prunes and late winter apples.

The great drawback to this as well as other places remote from railroad and river communication is the almost impassable condition of the roads. When will our Legislature cease its idle prattle about laws which tend to benefit the few, and give us some good, sound legislation in this matter which will tend to build up our country, make trade lively, and benefit the whole people? Well I had almost forgot to tell you as I promised in the beginning about the origin of the name Horse Heaven. It is this: In the terrible winter of '52 and '53, so well remembered by many old settlers, one Jackson herding a number of horses lost a great many. After much search he found them safe and doing well here. After taking them away, those that had strayed came back here immediately; hence the appropriate name,

From Damascus.

DAMASCUS, March 4th, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Noting the fact that communications from this place to your valuable journal are quite a rarity, we have taken the matter in hand and will give a brief note relating to an entertainment given by the Damascus high school. Last Friday evening the residents of the vicinity were called together by the previous announcement that an opportunity would be afforded them of beholding the amateur efforts of the juveniles connected with this establishment of learning. The attendance was large, in fact too much so for the convenience of all, about three hundred persons being present, which in our opinion exceeded the capacity of the room in about the ratio of 2 to 1. Nevertheless, everything passed off as pleasantly as could be expected, nothing occuring to mar the serenity of the occasion, barring the circumstance that we were favored (?) with the presence of some young gentlemen(?) from Marshfield, who strenuously adhered to their motto of making themselves obnoxious to all as well as placing themselves before the public in the unenviable role of hoodlums of the first water. The chief musician of the evening was the Hon. Charles Dolquist, who performed on the accordeon in a manner highly creditable to himself, ourself, and mankind generally. We were not appointed critic, but our opinion is that the affair was a success. Much credit is due the principal, Mr. Forbes, for the manner in which he conducted the entertainment. We think all were well pleased and can but place in accordance the verdict of WE'UNS.

COURTING UNDER DIFFICULTIES.—A young friend living about six miles from this city sends us the following: A lively young fellow residing in this neighborhood went to see his sweetheart recently, as has been his habit for some time past. This time he rode dad's high-mettled work horse, and tied him up to eat post hay from 10 a. m. until 11 p. m., when the young man concluded to postpone his love making until the next Sunday. When he got to where the horse was tied, he found that the horse had not been turned loose, but, in fact, was tied better than when he left him—his head being tied to one post and his tail to another. The horse had not rubbed the halter off, for, in fact, it was hard for a man to do that without cutting off some foretop and mane. The saddle was fastened on good, but, from some mistake, by the rider or shed tender, it was on the wrong way; the stirrups were tied up most too short; the saddle blanket being most too thin, some straw had been placed under the saddle to save the horse's back. The young lover had a pocket knife, but no light, and not being "much of a Yankee, nohow," he could not get things straightened, so he had to walk home. To be continued.

FOUND.—M. G. Wills, in a letter to the Independent of last week, gives the following account of the discovery of the remains of young Calahan: "The remains of Clinton Calahan's son George, who got lost June 11, 1876, while out hunting in the mountains, were found last Sunday by a little brother of the deceased, while traversing an old unused trail about a mile east of the house. He discovered a shoe in the first place, and soon after found bones here and there. The boy ran to the house and told his father what he had found, who upon repairing to the spot soon identified the bones as those of his long lost son. It appears that the boy was following a trail made by stock across which a large tree had fallen in such a manner as to rest about three feet from the ground. It is supposed that when he stooped to go under the log the lock of his gun came in contact with the tree, thus discharging it and killing him. He lay just his length from the log. His remains were torn, probably by wild beasts, and it cannot be ascertained where the shot took effect. The skull even was mashed to pieces, but the identification was plain to his parents."

IN MEMORIAM.

FRED. SANDERS—DIED MARCH 8, 1877.

One friend more within a twelve-month long,
Hath ceased to move, amid the busy throng;
Just in his manhood's prime the treacherous dart
Sped from the hand of Death and pierced his heart;
Far from the home he loved, and kindred dear,
He wander'd to this land, and rested here;
Buoyant with hope that e'er a distant day,
Once more he'd tread the ancestral hall so far away;
But e'er the spring-time of his hope had shown
One bud or leaf expanding, or to fulness grown,
Keen winter's chills had froze the quickening germ,
And cold, relentless Death had claimed him ere his turn;
And thou, for aye, art gone, friend of all our joys,
And we are left to eke out life with its alloys;
Thou, to a rest, where no sorrows are, nor pain,
We, to regret our loss, e'en not to share thy gain.
O, could it be, and it may be—that thou canst read the heart,
Then e'en thou knowest now, how we were loth to part
With thy companionship; as thou, with thy young life,
Didst hope to see thy home once more; so rife
With all that makes thee glad again,
When memory's bells did chime their sweetest strain.
The ship thou sawest anchored in thy bay,
Unfurled her snowy sails for thee, but sped away,
Not to thy earthly home, of distant clime,
But o'er the ocean of immeasurable time—
Hath furled her sails, and anchors safety cast,
Within the haven of eternal rest, at last!

The lodge charter was not surrendered, as it was deemed probable that the organization might be revived at no distant day.

Breathing Miasma Without Injury.

There is no exaggeration in the statement that thousands of persons residing from one year's end to another in fever and ague regions on this Continent and elsewhere, breathe air more or less impregnated with miasma, without incurring the disease, simply and only because they are in the habit of using Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a preventive. It has frequently happened, and the fact has been amply attested by the parties themselves, that persons surrounded on all sides by neighbors suffering the tortures of this shivering and burning plague have enjoyed absolute immunity from it, thanks to the protection afforded by the Bitters. Nor is that standard ranti-febrile cordial less efficacious in remedying than in preventing chills and fever, bilious remittents, and disorders of a kindred type. Taken between the paroxysms, it speedily mitigates their violence, and eventually prevents their recurrence. These facts, convincingly established by evidence, appeal with peculiar force to travelers and sojourners in malarious districts.

Unsolicited Testimony.

Fairfield, Me. April 28, 1861.

Gentlemen—Seeing numerous certificates in the Maine Farmer, endorsing the merits of the Great Lung Remedy, WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, I am induced and I take great pleasure in giving publicity to the great cure it accomplished in my family in the year 1856. During the summer of that year my son Henry A. Archer, now postmaster at this place, was attacked with spitting of blood, cough, weakness of lungs, and general debility, so much so that our family physician declared him to have "scated consumption." He was under medical treatment for some time, but received no benefit from it. At length, from the solicitation of himself and others, I was induced to purchase one bottle of WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, which benefitted him so much I obtained another, which in a short time restored him to his usual state of health. I can safely recommend this remedy to others in like condition, for it is, I think, all it purports to be—THE GREAT LUNG REMEDY FOR THE TIMES!

The above statement, gentlemen, is my voluntary offering to you in favor of your Balsam, and is at your disposal. A. ARCHER.

No use for the ladies, or any one else, to think of going to Portland to buy goods for I am Determined to Sell Cheap and not to allow myself to be

UNDERSOLD IN THE STATE OF OREGON.

All I ask is a fair chance and quick payments, believing as I do that

Twenty Years Experience in Oregon City enables me to know the requirements of the trade. Come one and all and see for yourselves that the old stand of

THOMAS CHARMAN

cannot be beaten in quality or price. It would be useless for me to tell you all the advantages I can offer you in the sale of goods, as every store that advertises does that, and probably you have been disappointed. All I wish to say is

Come, and See, and Examine for Yourselves, for I do not wish to make any mistakes. My object is to tell all my old friends now that I am still alive, and desirous to sell goods cheap, for cash, or upon such terms as agreed upon. Thanking all for the liberal patronage heretofore bestowed.

Tonic.

Every one, at times, feels the necessity of some restorative of the vital powers, depressed by mental or bodily exhaustion. In such conditions let every one, instead of flying to the alcoholic or medicinal stimulants, which must be followed by depression equal to their excitement, reinvigorate his deranged system by the natural tonic elements of the PERUVIAN SYRUP. Sold by all druggists.

Housewives, Attention.

For 75 cents I will send you a receipt for making a superior article of honey, at a cost of 8 cents per pound, unexcelled for table use. Also for 75 cents a receipt for making a better quality of soap, at a cost of one and a half cents per pound for soft, and three cents per pound for hard. Either the soap or honey can be made within fifteen minutes by a child. The saving made by a household in one year's time is incalculable. Both receipts for $1 and and a three cent postage stamp.
