The New York Herald, we scarcely believe, can have been bought by the San Francisco land speculators, yet it is most earnest in its labors for the rooting out of Mormonism. In an editorial it uses the following language: "When lawdefying bigamy, murder, tyrrany, and blasphemy have been practiced for thirty or forty years under a mask of religwith each succeeding move. ion, and an opportune event opens the way for their speedy extinction, nothing could seem more unseasonable than to make this an occasion for preaching the sacred rights of conscience and the duty of toleration. The e could not be a greater affront to religion itself or to the principles of toleration than a protest against efforts to break up the pestilent nest of abominations which has so long defied the laws and reeked with every crime denonnced in the Decalogue. Religion forsooth! Is lust relig on? Is wholesale massacre of the innocent religion? Are treachery and secret assassination, and mutiny against the law, and made the laws respected. Shall we be troubled with compunctions of insured peace. conscience lest we do injury to wolves because they appear in sheep's clothing?" Another objectionable feature of Mormonism is the close alliance between Church and State, so utterly repugnant to the genius of American institutions. This olious alliance should be destroyed, root and branch, as well as the abject and degrading slavery of the weaker sex which depraves their morals as a means of reducing them to the servile condition of bond women. Would the Lafavette Courier have spared Southern slavery if a pretense of religion, or land grabber story had been set up for its justification? The one is as logical as the other.
