OREGON CITY, THURSDAY, NOV. 8, 1877.

Death of Senator Morton.

This great and distinguished American statesman died at his residence in Indianapolis, Indiana, on the morning of the 2d inst. The political history of the country for the past sixteen years is a part of the great man who has passed from the stage of active life to a peaceful rest. None, not even those who disagreed politically with Senator Morton, will deny the fact that he was one of the ablest men of the present age. He has held many prominent positions, being elected during the war Governor of his State, and by his faithful and honest services so endeared himself to the people that he was elected to the position which he held at the time of his death. In the Senate he held the position of Chairman on several of the most important committees, and in whatever position he was placed, his influence and talent made him th leader. In the last Republican National Convention he had many strong supporters for the Presidency, and under ordinary circumstances might have proven the successful candidate. He was a man of determined will and consequently found many opponents even in his own party. In his political views he was radical, believing himself right, he was always willing to fight to the bitter end for that right.

He was chairman of the Grover investigation committee which visited our observations in regard to our wants. portions and will yield good crops next existence of such weed upon his land. were expected to be of great benefit to onr State in future legislation by Congress. But all his earthly expectations and aspirations are ended. The good he has done will live after him; let his faults, if he had anv, be buried with him. Men of his experience and ability | prise. are scarce, and we believe the most brilliant mind of the highest legislative body of our nation has been lost to the people of this country.

Will be Repealed.

The Democrats in Congress are determined to repeal the specie resumption act at the present session. We see no good which this repeal can bring upon the country. Steadily for the past ten years has the currency of the country been advancing to a par value, until it is now worth as much as silver. The repeal of this act wil unsettle the finances of the country to such a degree as to bring paper money down to what it was a few years ago, and while we may find greenbacks more plenty, their buying value will be materially decreased. The Democrats in Congress are trying hard to place their party on a greenback platform, and while they are doing so, propose indirectly to repudiate the national bonds. Of course, the principal object of their purposes will be kept from view, but this is what they are driving at, and when the bill is once repealed, we shall find them next declaring greenbacks receivable for all dues, including duties on imports. This would leave the administration without the necessary coin to pay interest on its public debt, and, as a consequence the faith of the nation will be destroyed. No nation can afford to dishonor its obligations any more than an individual, and we appredend that the Democrats will soon find that the honest people of the country are opposed to repudiating the just obligations of

The Silver Bill.

The Democrats in Congress took advantage the other day of the absence of a number of the members and passed through the House the silver bill. This bill provides for the coinage of the old silver dollar, and making it a legal purposes. tender for general use. We are not of those who believe that legislation on . the currency of the country can make any kind of money the equal value of gold, which is really the standard value of the world, and hence can see no good to be accomplished in passing a law which is calculated to drive from the country gold, and leave us nothing but silver as our circulating medium. Too much legislation on the currency question has been more injurious to the public good than too little of late years. and we trust that the tinkers of our finances will find it to the best interests of the people to let this matter alone.

What is Congress Doing?

The President called a special session of Congress for the purpose of passing the army appropriation bill. It has now been in session over three weeks, and thus far the object for which it was convened has not been accomplished, nor is it any nearer than when Congress United States Senate to change the day ecutive Office, in the city of Salem, this first met. There has been absolutely of the Presidential election from the Attest, nothing done so far, and the present first Tuesday after the first Monday in S. F. A Good Time Dawning.

A new era has commenced in Clackaonly thing needed to make it one of the idly enforced: best in production and wealth is enterprise and industry. In all parts of the county the evidence of this new era is pastures new, their places are rapidly filled up by new comers. Notwithstandcannot help feeling that they are in need of a good shaking up to make them aware that good times are dawning upon work alone will give them a share in the new prosperity. The day has passed when our farmers can make a good livworking a few months out of the year, and the fogies who still hold to this idea are no benefit to our county, and it is well if they depart for other fields. No party in Congress, so far as the Chief Executive is concerned, now places all the responsibilities of the selection or rejection of men nominated for office, just where they belong-with the representatives of the people. His duty properly ends with the presentation of public matters to Congress. He has no business to attempt to influence legislation. Such influence is not republican in its character or tendencies. It is left with the law-makers to decide whether the President is right or wrong in his

Does the President need a party in Congress? If his work is good should it not be endorsed, regardless of party biases, apart from partisan meannesses? Should unjust acts be forced upon the country simply because a party rules in Congress? Congress, as the ideal, is indorse or reject. It will kill one-man this matter than its reinstatement as the main essential of a government by and for the people. If the President contemplates doing this thing, he only revives a forgotten but absolutely necessary element of Republicanism. CHICAGO, Nov. 1 .- Senator Morton died at 5:20 p. m. About noon, Mrs. Morton and her sons, by her request, were left alone with the Senator for about an hour. What passed between them it is not proper to enquire. Before 5 o'clock it became evident he had entered upon his last hour on earth. He in a half lying and half sitting position. As he grew weaker the supporting pillows were withdrawn so that he lay prone upon the bed. A deep silence now pervaded the room and remained unbroken except by an occasional question to the dying man. Once when the Senator exclaimed "I am dying," his sister-in-law, Mrs. Holloway, inquired. "You are not afraid to die. Oliver?" he indicated no by shaking his head. Soon after a similar exclamation, question and answer passed between him and Dr. Thompson. At 5:10 he exclaimed 'I am dying, I am worn out," and these were his last words. From this on it was difficult to discover that life remained. On the doctor's announcement "He is going," the gaze of his wife and sons became fixed on the face of the husband and father, with now and then a piteous look of inquiry toward the doctor until the further announcement. "It is over." The widow clasped her sons to her, exclaiming quietly, but in tones never to be forgotten, "My darltion of the mayor, the city bells have been tolled 54 strokes, indicating the dead senator's age.
