

WIT AND HUMOR.

This is an off year for heads in Constantinople.

The trouble with Congress—Too many men of many mines there.

Modern marriages, says a contemporary, begin and end within a court.

Boresome codfish is the latest luxury. It reminds us of a good many aristocratic young men.

It would have been better for Cornelius Vanderbilt if he had consented to die sooner and leave less.

Young men turn over a new leaf about January 1st, while young women turn over old leaves early in the year.

When a girl gets mad and rises from a fellow's knee, but thinks better of it and goes back again, is what they call a relapse.

Two months ago they lunged over the gate for hours. Such nights as these they smack, shiver and away he goes on a dog trot.

In these times, even two shillings will make a creditor knock pretty hard at your door, but twenty shillings make one pound.

It may not be "all of death to die," as the old hymn puts it; but it is the only thing about it that gives the undertaker any satisfaction.

Mr. Gudgeon—"Oh, I say, now, Miss Ada, you are fishing for a compliment." Miss McGee—"Oh, dear, no; I never fish in shallow waters."

"Are these soaps all one scent?" inquired a lady of a juvenile salesman. "No, ma'am, they're all ten cents," replied the innocent youngster.

You can't tell a man's character by the way he shakes hands. He may be annoyed at the tightness of his new suspenders, and hardly grips at all.

No minister who smokes can now be admitted to a Methodist pulpit in Tennessee. This is a novel way to weed out the clergy.—N. Y. Commercial.

They say the Indian name for an editor is "Wo-rack-tah-cho-he-ha-law." That's what we always thought it was. It means "tired and hungry," probably.

In reading a hymn to be sung one Sunday afternoon, a New York minister recently said: "You may omit the fourth verse. I don't believe it's true."

Decorating pottery is all the rage. When the mania has once entered a house, about the only jar you can find there not ornamented is a "family jar."

A RACINE girl baby has just been born into the world with seven fingers on each hand.—Philadelphia Chronicle. Won't she make the piano of the future sick?

—Eaton Free Press.

"ADAM, what would be more unfeeling than directly to change your wife for your old transmission about the apple?" "I give it in."—"In-sin-you-ate it."

When a clergyman remarked there would be a nave in the new church the society was building, an old lady whispered that she "knew the party to whom he referred."

Our modest young men will breathe easier when some ingenious chap invents a turkey-carving contrivance that works with a crank like an apple parer.—Worcester Press.

A PLAY called "The Colorado Beetle" has been put upon the stage in England. It ought to run pretty well. Now won't somebody bring out a grass-worm? —N. Y. Com. Advertiser.

An American tourist says that a San Domingo revolution consists of "a few slaves, three or four hoots, some one accidentally wounded, and 'Come home, darling'—all is forgiven."

SPEAKING of the Black Hills editors as poker players, the Deadwood Mirror says, if a fence rail was put up as a blind, the editors are so poor that not one of them could straddle it.

STATISTICS show that the number of idiots is increasing; and yet some papers continue to make war on quack doctors. What a quack doctor would like to kill off the fools!—Detroit Free Press.

A PARAGRAPH states that forty years ago a missionary was not allowed to remain on the Fiji Islands. All of which means that they generally died from the effects of the cat.—N. Y. Evening Telegram.

SEVERAL exchanges are giving directions "How to dress." The most sensible way is to stay in bed till the fire is started, and then take your clothes and trot out to the dining room stove.—Home Sentinel.

"Oh, here is a real cat," exclaimed a Southern Illinois youth at a recent corn-husking bee. "And here is another," cried a pretty girl at his side, as she gave him a stinging box alongside his head when trying to kiss her.

The Presbyterian Church has just decided that women cannot be permitted to preach in its pulpits. But the Presbyterians, or any other church, have the power to prevent women from lecturing in bed at unreasonable hours of the night.

"If I was a horse now," mused a big boy, as he struggled up Griswold street the other day. "I'd be stabled, rubbed down and fed, but I am a boy, and I've got to go home, clean up and get ready to bring in wood, tote water and rock the dear old baby for an hour or two."

BILL SHUTE was a member of the 26th. While the boys crowded around the old flag at a recent reunion, Bill, with an irrepressible humor, called out: "Boys, I am no speaker, but there's a blamed sight more of you than I ever saw in a fight." This brought down the house.

A LOWELL firm sent a lot of bills West for collection. The list came back with the result marked against each name, one being marked "dead." Three months afterward the same bill got into a new lot that was forwarded, and when the list came back the name was marked "still dead."

We have done some awful mean things in our life, but we were never mean enough to hurt the feelings of the crossing by stepping off in the mud. There's something human left about us if we are in the newspaper business.—Keokuk (Iowa) Constitution.

"How was the sermon this morning, my darling," asked a fond mother of her daughter. "Oh, it was horrid, stupid and dull, ma—something about—let me see—'Thou shalt have no idols'—I don't remember exactly, for I was so put out by that silly drift, Belle Hinosaw, coming into the next pew with fourteen button kids when I had only twelve, that I couldn't keep my thoughts collected."

Law a Hundred Years Ago.

The Albany Law Journal finds in Hall's history of Eastern Vermont some account of the laws which were in force a hundred years ago.

"Burglary was punished by branding with a B on the forehead, and nailing one of the offender's ears to a post and cutting it off, and whipping; for the second offence there was the like branding, and nailing, and cutting off of the other ear; for the third offence the punishment was death, the offender being deemed 'incorrigible.' Counterfeiting was punished by cutting off the right ear, branding with C, and perpetual imprisonment. Perjury was punished by a fine of £50 and imprisonment for six months, but if the offender could not pay the fine he was let off by sitting in the pillory two hours, and having both ears nailed and cut off. Willful lying, to public prejudice or private injury, or deceiving or abusing the people with false news or reports, was punished by fine, sitting in the stocks and whipping, the punishment being increased with each repetition of the offence, except that in no case was the number of strokes of the whip more than nine. Theft was punished by compelling threefold restitution, by fine and by a sort of temporary slavery, the prosecutor being empowered to dispose of any offender in service to any subject of the state for such time as he might be assigned to the prosecutor by the court. Unreasonable night walking, that is to say after nine o'clock, was prohibited, as was also the conveying of persons under the government of parents, guardians or masters after the curfew hour. Tavern era hanaters were punished by posting their names at the door of every tavern prohibiting the tavern-keeper from supplying them with anything in the way of food or drink. No clamors, no shouting, running, dancing, jumping, swimming or blowing of horns was tolerated on the Lord's day. Listening to the sermons in such times as were appointed for the time of public worship was not permitted. Secular meetings of any number of persons in the street or elsewhere on Saturday or Monday evening were forbidden under penalty of a fine or the stocks.

Mr. Hall gives several notable instances of popular legal errors prevailing in Vermont. One notion was that if the friends of one dying in prison carried his remains beyond the boundaries of the jail, they were accomplished of an 'escape,' and liable to satisfy the judgment by virtue of which he had been confined. Another notion was that if one should bury the body of an unimprisoned debtor he thereby became a felon, and liable to imprisonment, and to discharge the debtor's obligations. In the case of Judge Chandler, who died while confined in jail for debt, his interment became a serious problem. In this predicament the jailor discovered a way of stretching that he had not included within the jail liberties a small portion of the adjoining burying-ground. A grave was dug, commencing just outside the jail-yard, sloping under the fence, in a sufficient depth to give obliquity, was obtained. So Judge Chandler was buried after a Christian fashion, and yet no 'escape' was suffered.

How THE FRENCH WORKMAN LIVES.—The French laborer probably works more for his wages than any other. His food is cheaper and more nourishing. His bouillon is the liquid essence of beef at a penny per bowl. His bread at the restaurants is thrown in without any charge, and bread in the streets is sold for nothing. His hot coffee and milk is peddled about the streets in the morning at a sou per cup. It is coffee, not slops. His half bottle of claret is thrown in at a meal costing twelve cents. For a few cents he may enjoy an evening's amusement at one of the many minor theaters, with his coffee free. Sixpence pays for a nicely cushioned seat at the theater. No gallery gods, no peanuts, pipe smoke, drunkenness, yelling or howling. The Jardin des Biers, the galleries and the museums of the Louvre, Hotel Clugny, palace of the Luxembourg and Versailles are free for him to enter. Art and science hold out to him their choicest treasures at small cost, or no cost at all. French economy and frugality do not mean that country is retrenchment and self-denial which would deprive life of everything which makes it worth living for. Economy in France, more than in any other country, means a utilization of what America wastes away, but it does not mean a pinching process of reducing life to a barren existence of work and bread and water.

HABIT OF DISRESPECT IN THE FAMILY.—One of the dangers of some life is this habit of disrespect—that which is bred by familiarity. People who are all beauty and sunshine for a crowd of strangers, for whom they have not the slightest affection, and all ugliness and nastiness to their own, by whose love they live. The pleasant little pithiness of address and personal adornment which mark the desire to please, are put on purely for the admiration of those whose admiration goes for nothing, while the more that they are doing, and the more the ragged brows and threadbare coats, the tousled hair and stubble beard, which, if marking the ease and comfort, or the sans facon of home, mark also the indifference and disrespect that do so much to mar the sweetness and delicacy of daily life. And what is true of the dress is still truer of the manners and tempers of home, in both of which we often find too, that want of respect which seems to run side by side with affection in the custom of the relations existing between marriage and longevity. Old maids and bachelors, it says, rarely attain to extreme old age, and then it tells of people living to extraordinary ages by wedding a dozen times or so, while James Gordon, who died in 1772, at the age of 101 years, having had seventeen wives in the grave, and Margaret McDowall, a Scotch woman, died in 1765 at the age of 105, having wept at the untimely demise of the husband whose name she had borne in rotation. Thus far the Review does not put a very extraordinary tax upon one's capacity for bolting a tough morsel, but the strain is rather severe when it goes on to speak of a man named Kavin, who died in Hungary in 1741, the man aged 107 and the woman 164, leaving a tender youth 116 years old to bewail his orphanage and reflect on the strength of that tie which held his parents together for 148 years.

NINE men out of ten, when you run against them in the dark, will say Hello! The other one will utter the first syllable and leave you to complete the other world.

Old Rivers Utilized.

Running water leaves on the earth's crust marks as permanent as any of the violent convulsions of nature. The disintegration of the Tertiary period, probably many years ago, but now dried up, are vast storehouses of wealth. They are carefully searched out and worked for tin. They acted precisely in the same way as the rivers of our own day, washing away the lighter rock, and leaving a concentration of the heavy ore in the channels. They vary considerably in depth, according to the remoteness of their origin. In one of them a shaft has been sunk to 60 feet, and at that depth the ground is a regular river bed, with, in some places, a collection of loose drift sand, heavily intermixed with tin-ore. It has been opened, at that depth, to the distance, horizontally, of 3,000 feet, and explored by boring down the surface for 600 feet more. The width of the seam has increased from 18 to 400 feet, and it contains an average of three feet of what the miners call "pay drift," that is to say, soil, sand, and tin, for it yields about 1 1/2 per cent of metal, an excellent product for tin-ore. Some of these deposits are discovered at only a few feet from the surface, a fact which shows that they are of much later date than the one referred to above, but still of comparatively recent antiquity. The state of the earth also shows that these later rivers were not in action for very long periods, as the ore has been far less washed. Twenty-five of these tin mines have been opened, and the tin has been the difficulty attending all new enterprises has retarded their development, yet within two years they have produced 2,050 tons of ore, worth about $1,000,000.

A KENTUCKY LOVE STORY.—A very sweet story of love comes from Cincinnati, whence very few sweet things ever come, and probably never should have, had this enchanting tale had not its hero and the heroine been imported from the occasion from Kentucky, a State which is abandoned to the raising of heroes and Democratic majorities, and heroines, and superior whisky. Professor Pyle has taught school across the river from Cincinnati for many years, and devoted his evenings, and Saturdays and Sundays, and much other time, to Huldah, who was a schoolmarm, and this pleasant and interesting story is told in 50 and Huldah was 45. After 10 or 11 years, Huldah's folks, beginning to think they were going to altogether too much expense for fire-wood and coal oil, and extra dinners for the Professor, and feeling that the Professor had not been so good as all that, began to tell naughty stories about the Professor. This made Huldah cry and love him the more, and the strategy failing, he climbed in the parlor windows, and the boys pounded him to the masthead of the water trough. And then they fired blank cartridges at him in the still darkness of the night, and finally loaded their guns with beans and afterward with bird-shot. The Professor endured this exciting amusement for a few weeks, and then got mad, stole Huldah out of the house, ran away with her to Cincinnati, and they were married! Young Kentucky strategy has succeeded, with the invaluable aid of fence-boards and extra dinners for the Professor, and feeling that the Professor had not been so good as all that, began to tell naughty stories about the Professor. This made Huldah cry and love him the more, and the strategy failing, he climbed in the parlor windows, and the boys pounded him to the masthead of the water trough. And then they fired blank cartridges at him in the still darkness of the night, and finally loaded their guns with beans and afterward with bird-shot. The Professor endured this exciting amusement for a few weeks, and then got mad, stole Huldah out of the house, ran away with her to Cincinnati, and they were married! Young Kentucky strategy has succeeded, with the invaluable aid of fence-boards and extra dinners for the Professor, and feeling that the Professor had not been so good as all that, began to tell naughty stories about the Professor. This made Huldah cry and love him the more, and the strategy failing, he climbed in the parlor windows, and the boys pounded him to the masthead of the water trough.
