

OREGON CITY, THURSDAY, JAN. 17, 1878.

The Waning Crescent.

The latest news from Europe throws a very sombre cloud over the waning Crescent. The Russians have crossed the Balkans, have defeated the Turks in a heavy engagement, are but a hundred miles from the important city of Adrianople, and soon will be beating with their sabres against the very walls of Constantinople.

Eastern Press on Chinese.

The stand that many Eastern papers take on the Chinese question is not unlike their position on railroad subsidies. They have no use for such things now; all their needed railroads are built, and it is very simple to take high moral grounds against squandering the public domain.

Why Croak?

It seems to be the universal fashion to groan and lament over the hard times, debt, taxes, waste, expense and ruin, and one runs a risk of being considered a heretic who dares to wear a cheerful face and suggest that possibly the country is not going to "the demitition bow-wow."

Reputation.

After Tennessee and Virginia shall have gotten through with skinning their creditors in the interest of public morality, it will be in order for them to propose an amendment to the constitution which shall prevent the disgrace of reputation by prohibiting any State from going into debt beyond its means and from subsequently "going back on" its obligations.

The old "war horses" of the Democratic party are nosing about their armorial closets and are brushing up their battered helmets for another contest. Their organs are flooded with advice to "keep together," "be not led off by side shows," look out for independent movements in the interest of Mitchell, "vote the Democratic ticket even if B. L. Zebub is the party nominee," and all that well worn thunder.

The press of Eastern Oregon, irrespective of politics, is unanimous in its condemnation of the course pursued by the Oregonians on the railroad question. The "only paper" is fast losing its prestige, and, if we mistake not, Scott will follow in the footsteps of his predecessor.

Geo. H. Penleton has been elected to succeed Stanley Matthews as Senator from Ohio.

Oregon Workingmen, Attention.

At the Workingmen's Congress recently held, we believe, in St. Louis, its principal business appeared to be spelling members who were not real workingmen. At the rate they were going it is calculated the whole party will be expelled before the next election, a process that cannot be regarded with apprehension, for it may reach Oregon.

For workingmen we have the highest opinion and regard, but for their leaders, ninety times out of a hundred, nothing but contempt. Cassius who attempted to force the Agrarian law upon Rome was a most plausible talker, and succeeded in seducing the lower classes into the belief that he was a public benefactor, instead of the arch demagogue. Let the laboring classes around the Byzantine city be said to be inadequate, and imperfect and weak. The Ottomans, furthermore, are very much irritated at England's course. The Porte was induced to believe, that inasmuch as John Bull was peculiarly interested in Turkey's success, he would if need be aid in bringing about such a result.
