

THE ENTERPRISE.

THURSDAY, JULY 10, 1884.

For President. James G. Blaine, Of Maine. For Vice President: Gen. John A. Logan, Of Illinois.

Six years ago James G. Blaine crossed the continent by way of the canon and Central Pacific, trying on his jenny at Salt Lake. To wine, dine and feast strangers of note who visit the city is one of the strong points of the Blaineism.

INDEPENDENCE DAY.

OREGON CITY. The anniversary of the Declaration of Independence was generally observed all over the county. Nearly every precinct had its celebration. In Oregon City it was really a gala day, nearly every store being closed after 11 o'clock A. M.

PLEASANT HILL.

At Pleasant Hill the citizens met at Goulding's grove. The Aurora band was in attendance and played many national airs. Mr. R. V. Short read the Declaration of Independence and Hon. F. O. McCown, delivered a very able and pleasing address.

MOUNT ZION.

There was a large attendance. Mrs. Noe read the Declaration of Independence. Rev. Jno. G. Hudson delivered the oration. Mr. Jas. Burlingame president. The table for dinner was set by 12 o'clock and was well patronized.

NICHOLAND.

At Highland the attendance was very large. Five Sunday schools were present with their teachers and superintendents. Mr. Holloway read the Declaration of Independence and Rev. Mr. James delivered the oration.

[Continued from first page.] know at least where he ought to be found. And I believe the building will be sufficient for at least one hundred years to come without much addition or repairs.

A word about jails. You know what we have got. We have had it a long time. We want it no longer. It has been condemned by many a grand jury and "condemned" by many a poor prisoner who has slept in those iron cells which have about ventilation enough for a guinea pig.

Although the community has suffered very little as yet for want of such a building, and perhaps another year might pass without its being occupied, which it is hoped might be the case, yet we are assured that it is better policy to have the building standing without a tenant than to have it with a tenant and in order to promote industry and the peace and welfare of the citizens of Oregon, this government must be prepared to discontinue its inaction and to take some action.

It seems that the three calamity feared by the executive committee really befell the country, however, before that jail was built. An old fellow named Watson, it is said, assaulted one Mountain Robson with a knife and cut him up pretty badly. Watson was arrested, tried and convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary according to the forms of the Iowa code, which had been adopted by the people here.

Eight years ago, several thousand dollars worth of property elevated to the territory, and the legislature had money to build a jail. Dr. John McLoughlin generously donated a lot on the rocky point on the west side of Water street, across from the north half of block 3, for the purpose. The jail was soon built. It stood near the edge of the rocks, where a fall would precipitate one into the waters of the Willamette. It was formed of double tiers of heavy logs, one tier standing upright, and the other crossing laterally, the two being firmly spiked and bolted together with iron spikes and bolts.

The number of criminals was small and the grade of crime petty, so that the county authorities got along with temporary arrangements for confining offenders until the jail now in use was erected.

At Highland the attendance was very large. Five Sunday schools were present with their teachers and superintendents. Mr. Holloway read the Declaration of Independence and Rev. Mr. James delivered the oration. The occasion was a pleasant picnic and was held in Frasier's grove, a beautiful shady spot.

whole territory, having one judge. The usual arrangement, and the one we now have, was exactly reversed. It is to be supposed that lawyers were scarce and enough could not be found to fill the district courts, so three citizens of good judgment and common sense, but of limited knowledge of legal science, were placed in the district courts, and the best lawyer available was made supreme judge to correct the errors of the lower courts.

The judges of the district court who first commenced business at Mr. Hatch's house Oct. 7, 1847, were Peter G. Stewart, Frederick Prigg and F. W. Pittygrove. Mr. Stewart was in a watchmaker and jeweler, or as he then called himself, a "silversmith."

But I must pass from the judges to mention one of two of the lawyers who joined to start the machine in this country. The first was A. L. Lovejoy. He was from Boston and had great credit in his line in his early days. He was active, courteous and popular. He was in many prominent positions, but lacking the force to attain the highest, he turned to the law, and again made money and lost it.

Then there was W. G. T. Vault. He was from "Arkansas" and was one of the "Arkansas" style. He knew something about law, and had a very rough, native, and somewhat way of applying it. His writing was the most execrable character. He afterwards moved to Jackson county, where he was elected prosecuting attorney. It was related that upon one occasion he drew an indictment against a criminal for something which I do not now remember.

The supreme court seemed to have little to do. The cases did not go up in large numbers. Dr. J. L. Babcock, whose name often appears in the archives, was chosen. He had a very prominent part. I never saw him, and cannot speak particularly of him. He died or resigned, and was succeeded by Hon. J. W. Nesmith, afterward United States senator and member of congress.

Hon. Peter H. Burnett succeeded him in 1845. Burnett was an eloquent and pleasing speaker, a fair lawyer, and an able legislator. He went to California in 1845, was governor of the state, judge of the supreme court, and is now said to have been many years president of the Bank of California, a leading financial institution in the bay city.

stood the necessity for, and value of, organized society, of law and order. Virtue and religion were to be promoted, learning encouraged, and vice, immorality and crime suppressed or restrained. They wanted no mob law or vigilance committee to carry out the behests of Judge Lynch.

Human nature is such that in its imperfections and weaknesses it only finds its best manifestations deliberately and under the impulse of passion. Whatever is the result of passion, prejudice or non-deliberation is not generally unmixt with evil. The only times when it is not, which is revolution, is justified is when both the courts and the machinery for constituting them are in the hands of wicked and corrupt men, and when the voice of the people cannot find expression to effect the removal of bad judges and corrupt officials.

And he suggests that the true remedy in cases of abuse referred to is to be in making those criminals who have not been tried, but in hanging the corrupt judge, the corrupt juror, or the corrupt lawyer who may have procured their acquittal. He is a very good lawyer, and a very good man.
