Forming a Friendship.

It is a very simple process for children to become acquainted with each other, if they are left to their own devices. This is the way it comes to pass:

"Why, I did not know that you and that little girl had got acquainted yet," said a Roxbury father to his six-year-old son, who came in from a walk on the adjoining lawn with the tiny daughter of the new next-door neighbor.

"Yes, Clara and I have been 'quainted lots of days," said the very small boy.

"What did you say to her first?" asked the father.

"O, Clara spoke to me first. She came down by the chicken-house, and asked me how many prayers I say nights, and I told her; and then I asked her how many prayers she says, and she told me, and then we were 'quainted."—Boston Record.

The Old Doctor's Opinion.

Good old Dr. C——, on leaving a patient one evening, gave his opinion of her case in the following words, spoken in the slow, stately manner for which he was noted: "Madam, in the morning you will be better, or you will be worse, or you will remain as you are."—Harper's Magazine.

I. O. O. F. Anniversary.

The odd fellows celebrated their sixty-ninth anniversary day, in Portland last Thursday, with appropriate ceremonies. A great many visitors from different parts of the state participated in the exercises. From the interesting address of Wm. H. Barnes we clip the following interesting facts:

"Scarce had the pick of the miner begun to be heard in the hills, when sickness and death revealed that beneath the flannel shirt of the miner there had beat many a heart that had done grand work in the ranks of the odd fellows in other climes. Lodges soon sprang up till now the State of California has 310 lodges and 36,000 members, and assets of $2,100,000 and expends $200,000 annually for relief.

Oregon is no laggard in the matter of odd fellowship, and in 1855 obtained the first charter, and in 1857 the first encampment was organized. Last year, according to the report of Grand Secretary Bacon, you had 86 lodges and a membership of 3000, and the aggregate is still growing."

The speaker devoted a great deal of time in directing on the benefits of the order, and advised all young men to join the order, saying it would make them better fathers and neighbors, better Christians, and help them along the rugged pathway of life. He thought it foolish to belong to too many orders, so that it took all one's income and time. This was a foolishness which no wise person should indulge in.

SAVING THE CHILD.

How Bixby's Self-Possession Under Trying Circumstances.

"If a person swallows poison by accident or purposely, instead of breaking out into incoherent and multitudinous exclamations, dispatch some one for the doctor."

"That sounds sensible," said Bixby, as he read the above advice to his wife one evening. Then he read:

"Meantime run to the kitchen, get half a glass of water, put into it a teaspoonful of salt and as much ground mustard, catch a firm hold of the person's nose, then down wit the mixture and un will come the poison."

"There, my dear," said Bixby to his wife. "You'd better keep that in mind in case one of the children should accidentally get hold of poison and I shouldn't be home. But you women have right off the handle at the very time you ought to be self-possessed and have all your wits about you."

The very next day the servant came rushing up stairs and gasped out:

"Oh, ma'am! Oh, Mr. Bixby! The baby! He's swallowed half a bottle of laudynum, and—"

"Great Scott!" shouted Bixby, jumping six feet straight into the air and yelling like a Comanche. "The child 'll be dead in ten minutes. What we going to do? Run for the doctor! Get some of the neighbors in! Call somebody in from the street! My good Lord! Are we all going to sit here and see the child die? We must have help! Help! Murder! Can't you think of something to do? Here, what'd I read the other day? I told you to remember. It said half a glass of salt to a teaspoon of water and a cup of mustard, didn't it? My soul! has the child got to die while we all sit here doing nothing! Give him warm water and soda! Run your finger down his throat! Do something! Put your head out of the window and yell for help!"

And while he was doing so himself and a crowd was collecting in front of the house, Mrs. Bixby, who had not said a word, discovered that the child had swallowed nothing but a teaspoon of vanilla extract.—Detroit Free Press.

For Toilet Use.

Ayer's Hair Vigor keeps the hair soft and pliant, imparts to it the lustre and freshness of youth, causes it to grow luxuriantly, eradicates Dandruff, cures all scalp diseases, and is the most cleanly of all hair preparations.

AYER'S Hair Vigor has given me perfect satisfaction. I was nearly bald for six years, during which time I used many hair preparations, but without success. Indeed, what little hair I had was growing thinner, until I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor. I used two bottles of the Vigor, and my head is now well covered with a new growth of hair. —Judson B. Chapel, Peabody, Mass.

HAIR that has become weak, gray, and faded, may have new life and color restored to it by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "My hair was thin, faded, and dry, and fell out in large quantities. Ayer's Hair Vigor stopped the falling, and restored my hair to its original color. As a dressing for the hair, this preparation has no equal.—Mary N. Hammond, Stillwater, Minn.

VIGOR, youth, and beauty, in the appearance of the hair, may be preserved for an indefinite period by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "A disease of the scalp caused my hair to become harsh and dry, and to fall out freely. Nothing I tried seemed to do me any good until I commenced using Ayer's Hair Vigor. Three bottles of this preparation restored my hair to a healthy condition, and it is now soft and pliant. My scalp is cured, and it is also free from dandruff.—Mrs. E. R. Foss, Milwaukee, Wis.

NOCTURNE.

Soft night with the touch of a lover
Is waking the universe;
The forces of nature in chorus
A thousand responses rehearse.

The pale moon shining in heaven
Draweth in rapture the main;
The stars go singing together,
Joining in love's refrain.

The warm night breezes whisper;
Gently murmurs the sea;
The earth feels love's heart beating
And trembles in ecstasy.

They all to my soul are speaking;
Quiet and dumb I lie;
And yet, though my lips are silent,
Flashes my heart reply.

—Adeline E. Knapp in Godey's Lady's Book.

Value of a Red Cent.

"Are any of the cents valuable?" Mr. Richard Cogan was asked. "The date that is usually considered most valuable," he replied, "is the 1799; but the highest price I ever knew to be paid for one was for an 1804. It was a fine specimen—a bright red. This, unless a coin has been scoured or treated with vinegar, shows that it is uncirculated, just as it came from the mint. An old dealer can tell in a moment when a coin has been 'doctored.' People sometimes speak of anything that is not worth much as 'not worth a red cent,' but if that cent happens to be of a rare date its redness is $50 in its owner's pocket. This coin brought $205. I think it was the highest price ever paid for a United States cent."—New York World.

Running Rap'ds in Canada.

The running of rapids is the climax of the voyageur's adventurous life. Even the most experienced voyageur changes color with excitement when he feels the canoe crouch and spring, sway and dart over the first swells of a rapid. The voyageurs that I have known all possessed keen observation, a cool judgment, and a decisive turn of mind. In a small canoe of, say twelve feet, without much load, a man alone will kneel on the bottom about one-third of her length from the stern, and paddle down a rapid pretty well. But the typical crew in an eighteen foot canoe consists of a captain in the bow and a helmsman in the stern. —C. H. Farnham in Harper's Magazine.

Dreams and Lies.

It sometimes happens that persons—and this is especially true of young children—are unable to disassociate their dreams from realities. I have known children to be punished for telling lies when full inquiry showed that they were relating circumstances of which they had dreamed.—Dr. William A. Hammond.
