THE ENTERPRISE.

CHAS. MESERVE, Publisher and Proprietor.

WELER H. GARBERT, Assistant Editor.

OREGON CITY, JUNE 26, 1890.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

It is usually customary when one assumes control of a newspaper, to make announcement of that fact, with an outline of the policy that will be adopted in its management. Our most zealous efforts will be put forth to make THE ENTERPRISE a newspaper that will be worthy of the name, and a credit to Oregon City and Clackamas county. While we shall consider the advancement and upbuilding of Oregon City and Clackamas county paramount to all other objects, we shall not hesitate to advocate the principles enunciated by the republican party. The wonderful water power, timber resources, rich soil, and manufacturing facilities will receive our earnest attention, and with the assistance of the people, whose aid we shall endeavor to merit, will advertise the resources of this section in a way that will redound to the greatest good to the greatest number.

With this issue of THE ENTERPRISE my connection therewith ceases. In the three years and over that I have been connected with the paper, I have come to know and esteem as personal friends a large number of the readers of the paper. While the intimate association of editor and readers is thus severed I sincerely hope that the acquaintance and friendship formed between us may continue as pleasant as it has been in the past. The principal reason which led to the change was the knowledge that my health was not standing the strain of the many duties connected with the office.

Mr. Chas. Meserve succeeds me in the management of the office, and I desire to bespeak for him a continuance of the same kindly offices which have been extended toward myself, as I believe him worthy and well qualified to conduct successfully the arduous duties of editor and publisher. With the hearty co-operation of all readers of THE ENTERPRISE, the paper under the new management will be enabled to do much more than ever before to build up Clackamas county. I sincerely hope that all will help.

I desire in conclusion to thank all who contributed to make the paper a success during my connection therewith.

E. M. RANDS.

With fatal tornadoes, cyclones, electric and other storms in various Eastern states, the people of Oregon calmly pursue their way, satisfied with knowing that the worst that we can complain of is plenty of rain and an occasional rise in the rivers.

The so-called unsophisticated child of the forest is usually no novice in the mysteries of poker, however bland and childlike he may appear. A couple of local bunchgrass sports, says the East Oregonian, have found this out to their sorrow. In a series of games with Chief Peo, that sagacious brave has so far managed to come out $100 ahead of his white competitors.

The health committee, in their investigation of public nuisances, are taking a step which will meet the unqualified approval of all law-abiding and progressive citizens. Oregon City has outgrown her swaddling clothes, and the time is passed when dairy farms and pig pens should be tolerated within and prosper, municipal regulations would be strictly enforced, as other towns are doing; then visitors and investors will the more readily become favorably impressed with our possible future greatness.

The Fourth of July will soon be here with its attendant festivities, fire crackers, bombs and combustibles, and it behooves our citizens to adopt every precaution against any possible spread of fire that might result from their careless handling. Ever-watchful vigilance is the price of safety from a devastating conflagration. Oregon City cannot afford to have a fire at this stage of the game. And our authorities will no doubt see that the fire department is properly organized for the occasion, and the public take the proper precautionary measures.

Clackamas county and Oregon City should by all means begin at once to have a creditable exhibition at the forthcoming Industrial Exposition at Portland. Clackamas county, with her varied productions and manufacturing output, has the material to provide the best display of any town in the state, and active preparations should be commenced at once, as the time is short. The fair will be conducted this season on a larger scale than ever before, and visitors from the East will be present in unusual numbers, consequently the people of this section should spare no effort to make a most creditable display. Nothing will advertise the country to better advantage than a tastily arranged exhibition of its products.

Our free-trade friends frequently make out a plausible argument for their cause by assuming that there is no labor cost on the raw material. For example, the iron manufacturer who converts iron ore into pig iron is credited with the cost of labor employed in that process. It is claimed that the product is taxed by a duty nearly double the amount paid by him as wages. But this covers the iron ore as well as the labor converting that ore into pig iron. There is only one stage higher in the process of making fine steel from iron ore. To the maker of watch springs the iron is the raw material. It is just as reasonable to leave out of the account the labor of manufacture of steel as to leave out labor in the production of iron ore. To protect the skilled workman who labors in the later processes and leave unprotected the miner who digs the ore out of the earth and puts it where transportation can reach it to take it to market? The tax on what is described in commerce as the raw material amounts to more than twice as much as the labor in converting raw material to the finished article.

The dry season is rapidly approaching, and farmers and others interested in timber lands should be on their guard against the spread of forest fires, which are becoming so alarmingly prevalent during the hot summer months. Thousands of dollars worth of valuable timber was destroyed last season by the fire fiend, which spread devastation in every direction. Hunters, prospectors, and pleasure seekers often allow the fires to start and spread through carelessness, although in some instances they no doubt occur through design. The general land office have ordered notices posted in the timber regions west of the Mississippi, cautioning and warning all persons that hereafter the origin of all summer fires will be closely investigated, and where it can be proven that through carelessness or design, the parties implicated will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. There is much valuable timber in Clackamas along the foot hills, and in the vicinity of the Cascade Range, and it is hoped the settlers and the public generally, will aid the officers of the government in its effort to check this evil, and in the punishment of all offenders.

Rapid transportation is one of the principal elements in the growth and development of cities. Whenever a city has the natural advantages of climatic conditions, soil and water power, it only needs the addition of rapid transportation facilities to become a place of importance in the commercial and social world. Capital is quick to see the advantages thus offered, and is not slow securing the inducements offered. With all the agricultural resources, timber and water power, it would profit us but little if it were not for the advantages of river and rail transportation. It is of the utmost importance that the citizens of Oregon City should give every encouragement to rapid transportation lines between this place and Portland. Nothing will tend to build up the city more than rapid transit motor lines and fast boats. Messrs. Graham Bros. have rendered Oregon City a great service by establishing a fast line of boats between this place and Portland, and this enterprise should be duly appreciated. When the contemplated motor lines are completed, the value of rapid transportation will be the more perceptible.

The crowd who make Sunday hideous in the vicinity of Broderick Park, will probably hereafter conduct themselves more as orderly citizens should. Their action in attacking the Sheriff while in the discharge of his duties, cannot be too severely condemned, and they were fortunate to escape with a reasonable fine. While the hand of welcome is extended to visitors and excursionists to this city, the vicious and rowdy element must be compelled to observe a reasonable degree of decorum while sojourning here.

Howls loud and deep come from the cities of Salem and Portland, concerning the manner in which the census is being taken in those places. Many of the enumerators were given too large districts in the populous localities, and as a consequence are unable to complete the work within the time allotted to them. Superintendent Porter has telegraphed for them to continue work until they are through. As a whole, the census enumerators are having a hard time of it this season.

The roll-calls of Congress show that there are about a hundred representatives absent from the capital looking after their political fences. Unlike Hermann of Oregon, who remained in Washington to look after the appropriations for his state, many of these congressmen hold seats for close districts in which political competitors manifest a very lively disposition and cannot afford to lose a point or two. Personal interests therefore prove foremost to those of their constituencies.

The new hill road to Weslyn across the river is about completed, and affords a splendid drive. A number of new dwellings are being erected in that vicinity and the residents are jubilant over their new road.
