A little shoe upon the floor. A little lad with dark brown hair, A little blue-eyed face and fair, A little lane that leads to school,

A little pencil, slate and rule. A little hand within his laid:

A little old-time fashioned store. A little family gathering round; A little turf-heaped, tear-dewed wound; A little added to his soil, A little rest from hardest toil.

A little silver in his hair; A little stool, and easy chair; A little night of earth-lit gloom; A little cortege to the tomb.

The Story of a Life.

Say what is life? 'Tis to be born A helpless babe; to greet the light With a sharp wall, as if the moan Forefold a cloudy noon and night; To weep, to sleep, and weep again, With sunny smiles between; and then

And then apace the infant grows To be a laughing, puling boy, Happy, despite his little woes, Were he but conscious of his joy; To be, in short, from two to ten, A merry, moody child and then? And then in coat and trousers clad,

To learn to say the Decalogue And break it; and unthinking lad, With mirth and mischief all agog; A trusht off by field and fen, And then at last to be a man:

To fall in love; to woo and wed; With seething brain to scheme and plan To gather gold or toil for bread; To sue for fame with tongue and pen, And gain or loose the prize, and then; And then in gray and wrinkled Eld,

To mourn the speed of life's decline To praise the scenes in youth beheld, And dwell in memory of Lang Syne To dream awhile with darkened ken. Then drop into his grave; and then? The Return.

The bright sea washed across her feet.

As it had done of yore: The well-remembered odors sweet Came through her open door.

Again the grass his ripened head Bowed where her remnant swept; Again the fog-bell told of dread, And all the landscape wept.

Again beside the woodland bars She found the wilding rose, With petals five and heard of stars-The flowers our childhood knows.

And there, before that blosom small,

By its young face beguiled The woman saw her burden fall, And stood a little child. She knew no more the weight of love,

No more the weight of grief; So could the simple wild rose move, And bring her heart relief. She asked not where her love was gone

Nor where her grief was fled ; But stood, as at the great white Throne Unmindful of things dead.

GEORGE FRANCIS "HIMSELF AGAIN. -Train was probably himself the author of the rumors of his assassination and imprisonment. He is very fond of dying that he may enjoy the luxury of birth. Now he reports bimself as on the way to Tours, the seat of the French government, upon the invitation of the ministry. George Francis must feel at home with the French. They are the only people who can understand man after their own heart," and might well be chosen the president of their paper republic. While he was at Marseilles he printed a paper called the Revolution, made up of editorial puffs of himself and extracts of his speeches to the democratic clubs about the city The constant refrain of these was "Let us march to Berlin, and declare there the German republic." And with heroic self-sacrifice, he added, "If you have nobody to put himself at your head. I am here, and I will lead you to victory." His military genius crops out, also, in this remarkable suggestion; "You have in France many Ger can prisoners; let a special corp be clothedfin their uniforms, and make believe they are German troops, going home." Not only is he ready as a warrior for the field, but he shows himself a Carnot or a Stanton in organizing the material of war. Train announces that he has telegraphed "te Madrid, Constantinople, Sheffield, Birmingham, London, Trieste, Florence, Brussels, Auvers, Copenhagen, Dublin, New York, Omaha and San Francisco" for arms with which to supply his proposed army of invasion; but as the arms failed to come, he explains, "that great monopolist," as he calls King William,-this being the culmination of his epithets,—has probably bought them all up. There is something very Frenchy in all this. If Train is only, as some people say of him a grossly exaggerated American, he is but a slightly aggravated Frenchman. The permeates and possesses, all these are equally Train and equally French. A San Francisco correspondent gives the Topeka Record some facts as to Bre Harte which are interesting. He was born in Albany in 1837, his father be ing a professor in Albany Female Seminary. Early orphaned, he went to California at 17, but failed to succeed in school-teaching and mining, both of which he tried: After various adventures be became a compositor in a newspaper office at Eureka. Here he used to surreptitionsly contribute to the paper, transferring his essays from his mind to his composing stick, without the intervention of pen and ink, and crediting them to "exchanges." They attracted notice from the first, but it was some time before the authorship was discovered. He refused a situation in the editorial room, wishing first to master the me-chanical part of the business; but he once took charge of the paper for six weeks, during his employer's absence, composing his editorials mentally, and setting them up at once in type. Having harrowly escaped mobbing, bemassacre of Indians by the whites, he returned to San Francisco, and became s compositor in the office of the Golden Era, until his literary abilities were discovered, and he was promoted to the editorial department. He held several government positions, and was concerned in the management of the Californian, a weekly paper started by Charles H. Webb. It was with the foundation, however, of the Overland Monthly, in July, 1868, that his real celebrity began.

A ECONOMICAL KING .- It is no wonder that Prussia has a small debt com pared with other European nations, if all her monarche are as economical as King William. The following is a capital story: King William is not lavish on personal apparel. His valet recently gave him a hint to substitute a new coat for one which he had worn two or three years longer than he ought, and was thereupon summoned to the the royal presence.

"Where is my old coat, Jean?"

"I have taken it away, your majesty; it is not fit to be worn." "What are you going to do with it,

"I believe I am going to sell it." "How much do you think you will get for it?"

This was hard to answer, for no "old clo" Jew in the world would give a shiling for the old coat. Jean therefore hesitated a moment and then answered. "I believe I shall get about a dollar for it, your majesty."

The king took his pocket book from the table, opened it, and handed Jean the dollar. "Here is your dollar, Jean," said be. back to me; I want it yet."
