

Democratic Tactics.

It is very gratifying to realize as we go to positively do, that a great triumph is shaping for the Republican party in the next Presidential campaign, and that the principles of the party are to still command the united support of the men who during the war made up the loyal masses of the nation.

The Democratic platform is already indicated by the expression of the party leaders on many occasions. The only policy left for the party to pursue if it cannot accept reconstruction and go before the people with a pretense of making the best of the issues which apparently have been decided by the war, is to bitterly oppose the war and condemn its fruits; to fling out as the rallying cry the promise to repeal the Confiscation Act, to demand, and deprive the negro at least of his suffrage if not of his liberty. The Southern wing of the party controls its action, and the only way to enlist the earnest support of Southern Democrats, is to accept their active leadership and go into the campaign with them.

Democracy is becoming more and more allied to the Confederate hand, and is pledged to surrender the lead to the Ku Klux chivalry. If it could depend on its confederate allies implicitly in moments of crisis, it would not be so much of a party as it is now. It is a party that demands a prompt compliance with its demands and direct war upon the Government.

We have to oppose Democracy in this struggle, all of the loyalty developed since 1860, which can be depended on implicitly in moments of crisis, it would not be so much of a party as it is now. It is a party that demands a prompt compliance with its demands and direct war upon the Government.

Letter from Coos Bay.

EMPIRE CITY, April 24, 1871. ED. STATESMAN.—It again becomes my duty to chronicle another mariner disaster at this point. On the morning of the 17th, persons from the emerald coast, called the "Lookout" discovered something about five miles from shore, resembling a wrecked or dismantled vessel. Two steam tugs immediately put to sea, and it proved to be the fine schooner Margaret (my last lying on her beam ends, the crew were all clinging to the wreck, and were all rescued after having been in a dangerous and uncomfortable position for over twenty hours.

It seems the schooner struck in crossing the bar, and was soon filled. A fresh breeze coming on the carcass over the crew meanwhile taking to their boats. She had only left this port the day before with a full cargo of lumber, and was bound for Tahiti.

The small passenger boat lately seized by E. A. Woodruff, her efficient and trustworthy Deputy Collector of the Port, has I understand, resigned, and Judge A. A. Skinner has been appointed to the vacancy. More anon. J. A. SKINNER.

The Subsidy Business.

The granting of lands and subsidies to railroads has been in the past, but it has been necessary to secure the construction of roads across the continent and to open up and develop a great portion of the continent to settlement and occupancy. We have languished for many years waiting for the time to come when the improvement of Oregon could be practically commenced, and at last we see the day, the millennium, when our shores to settle here permanently and add to the wealth of our State. We have no occasion to complain of the liberality of the Government or censure those who have advanced the enterprises by which we profit, but yet it must become apparent to any candid eye that the business of granting subsidies may be greatly abused, and that there should be a limit to land grants, which should only be permitted in cases where there is no other means of securing development to remote sections of the country.

A member of the last Congress from Florida, who is now in Oregon, having been defeated for reelection by parties who could not make use of him for personal schemes, and to secure his aid in claiming subsidies for his projects, publishes an exposure of the means they used and the liberal offers they made to secure his influence on their behalf. He is a U. S. Senator named Ogborn, and declares that he offered $500,000 money, to secure his aid. He remained immovable in spirit and second time, and referred to Committee.

Resignation of Congressman Dickinson received. J. C. Baker is supposed to have resigned the office of U. S. Marshal for the district of Oregon, and is now in the city.

The Committee recommended the passage of an Ordinance to amend the franchise so as to require the Company to furnish water for fire purposes all over the city, and also for fountains in Willson's Avenue and Marion Square without additional compensation. San Domingo.

What has become of the great and absorbing question which the Democratic party was determined should be settled in the present year? Suddenly there has fallen a calm upon the troubled waters and this tropical difficulty has gone from our gaze.

President Grant has so gracefully thrown
