

Subscriptions Due.

Quite a number of Weekly Statesman subscribers are still owing for their subscriptions for the present year, which will expire in a few days. If not paid by the first of the month they are immediately in arrears. No one needs read any more than to pay down their subscription, and each subscriber is requested to do so.

THE COAST RANGE AND HOPE LINE.

In the descriptions of Oregon we have given from time to time there is one portion of the State which, upon reflection, we deem entitled to more particular notice than we have been able to give to it in treating of Western Oregon, and that is the Coast Range and Hope Line. This range, which extends from the mouth of the Willamette valley on the west, and for the other half lies across the mouths of the valleys of the Umpqua, Rogue and Coquille rivers. It divides the great interior valleys as they run from the coast to the interior, and is a more extensive range than the entire coast, especially being much cooler. This is owing to the fact that the district lies more immediately within the influence of the sea air, receiving, as it does, the cooling influence of the prevailing winds in summer, and the north-west winds in winter. These winds blowing against a mountain range, the soil of which is an absorbent clay loam, produces a forest growth of few regions of the globe can equal. It is especially a good country for the raising of grain, and is found to be remarkably adapted to the production of the cultivated grasses and all plants of the Pacific tribe. Its capacity to produce such crops as cabbage, turnips, potatoes or carrots can hardly be exaggerated by reasonable language. Near the sea, in locations lying open to the prevailing winds from the ocean, it is found that their influence is somewhat injurious to such grain crops as wheat and oats; a good growth of straw being always certain, but the grain sometimes blighting in the head and falling to ruin. It is not believed that any deleterious influences exist to such an extent as to prevent the settlers of the region from supplying themselves easily and abundantly with breadstuffs, but this, joined with the broken character of the country, together with its superior capacity to produce grain and stock, points to the Coast Range as the future Oregon. The view is sustained so far as experiments have gone at Clatsop Plains, which is the oldest settlement within this region, where butter and cheese have always been the staple productions of industry. The same is true of the coast settlements at Tillamook Bay. Of course in districts remote from large markets, as these are, the raising of cattle is always a part of the system, sometimes the leading part, and most important.

Writing for Newspapers.

Every newspaper has correspondents who desire to be heard, and in many instances are in hopes of establishing a literary reputation by writing for their country. These contributors furnish prose and poetry, fact, fiction and fancy, and wonder why they cannot be accommodated with publicity. Frequently they are the victims of the editors and editors to honor their productions with space to ignorance, prejudice or jealousy. This subject is well handled in an editorial reply to the New York Tribune addressed to aspirants for space in the columns of that paper, and we give a portion of it here, as it contains a subject which we have frequent occasion to consider. Its candor and sense must be apparent to every person cultured with common reason:

THE OREGONIAN LEARNERS OF THE DEATH OF JUDGE SHIPLEY.

The Oregonian learns of the death of Judge Shipley, Judge of Jackson County, who died on Wednesday last of pneumonia.

A new turn table is nearly completed for the West Side Railroad near the base yard.

Ague prevails at Portland on both sides of the Willamette.

The Nathan Jewett Truop are to visit Salem next week. Mr. Nathan came yesterday and engaged the Opera House.

They will probably commence about Wednesday. This company has been giving very successful entertainments at Portland. They lately came from Australia, and have been well appreciated in Salem as well as elsewhere.

TEWEN'S LECTURES.—Miss Carrie F. Young, M. D., will lecture this evening upon "Competition, and what it will do for us." Her lecture will be given at 7 o'clock, and will be a most interesting and valuable one.

LOCAL DIVULGERS.—Fraser's Oregonian has removed from his place of residence to the Commercial Hotel. Dr. Richardson and Dr. Richardson, who reside at the Commercial Hotel, will be the first of the season. Dr. Richardson has removed from his place of residence to the Commercial Hotel. NEW PUMPS.—The celebrated American submersible pump is advertised this morning, by the Pacific Pump Manufacturing Company, San Francisco. Great advantages are claimed for it, as the advt. states, simplicity, durability and economy are the most desirable qualities in machinery of any kind and this pump is said to combine them all.

DISMISSIVE.—Dr. Chase had a dismissive steam engine, of his own make, on exhibition yesterday at the Oregon Hotel. The engine is a very simple and economical one, and is said to be a very successful practitioner in eye diseases.

ACCIDENT.—While Mrs. Nemith and Mrs. Chase were diving up State street yesterday their horse became frightened and ran into the sidewalk, throwing Mrs. Chase out of the buggy but doing no serious injury.

WE ARE UNDER MANY OBLIGATIONS TO MR. A. BONNEY, a young graduate from the Willamette University, for daily reports of the proceedings of the Teachers' Association now in session.

SEVEN.—A large fire was raging about seven o'clock on the morning of the 22nd inst. at Salem last evening, which consumed the sky in a grand and beautiful manner.

REAR EXTENSION.—Wm. Davidson, Jr., Real Estate Agent of this city, has placed an order with him for a copy of the list of provisions for the Oregon State Fair, to be held at Salem, October next. Mr. Davidson exhibits a real feeling for the welfare of the community, and his efforts to improve the State are well known to all.

THE WEDDING.—The wedding of Mr. Davidson, Jr., and Miss Davidson, which took place at Salem last evening, was a most successful and beautiful one.
