

THE FOURTH.

How it was Celebrated Yesterday at Aurora, Gervais, and at Other Places.

There was a genuine jam at the morning train at the Salem depot yesterday morning, such as had not been seen before for several days.

There was a large crowd at this place, receiving the larger share of excursionists bound both ways.

The "plug uglies," by Billy Dugan, who is also a resident of Salem, were simply immense.

The ball game, between the Eagles of St. Paul, and our own Owls, of Salem, was a hoister, and the Owl knocked the Eagle bird's-eye out, if it was a Fourth of July celebration, and the eagle bird is a sorry looking spectacle this morning.

The ball in the evening was largely attended, and was a grand and enjoyable affair.

AT AURORA.

To say that all who celebrated at Aurora enjoyed themselves, is putting it mild, for that hospitable little town did its best yesterday.

The celebrations both at Gervais and Aurora were marked with quite good behavior, there being no fights reported.

ON THE BAY.

A Trip to Yaquina, and Notes by the Way—Salem People Sojourning There.

NEWPORT, OR., July 5, '86. ED. STATESMAN:—We, that is a large number of Salem's people and your correspondent, left Salem, the "city of peace," and passing across the river, and arrived at Derry on the west side division of the Oregon & California railroad about an hour and a half before "train time."

The hour and a half was then spent therefore in securing our tickets, getting our "luggage," as the Englishmen say, checked, and viewing the "sights." The sights consisted of the depot, a large two-story building, the upper story of which is occupied by the agent, and his family; a water tank, and the bridge across the "Rickreal," or, as it was formerly called, the "La Creole." About two hundred yards from the depot is the home of the late ex-Senator Nesmith, and his body lies interred just across the Rickreal.

At 11:05 a. m., promptly on time, the whistle of the locomotive warned us that our journey was about to be resumed. We boarded the cars and soon were whirling away toward Corvallis. Our route lay through, perhaps, the prettiest and the best part of Oregon. The scene is one of continual change all the way from Derry to Corvallis.

The mountains and the valleys, making a scene very pleasing to the eye. At about 12 o'clock the train pulled into Corvallis, and soon our party were "lunching" from well filled baskets in the "parlor" of the depot and freight house. The floor was not covered with brussels nor were there any upholstered chairs to speak of, but the luncheon was well enjoyed nevertheless.

It soon became evident that we were doomed to "wait" again, as the train would not pull out for Yaquina until 3 o'clock, owing to the non-arrival of a lot of people who had been expected to arrive at Albany by the east side train, and to come to Corvallis by stage.

The Oregon Pacific follows the winding course of Mary's river from near Corvallis to the summit of the Coast range and then strikes the circuitous and sharp curved gorge of the "Little Elk" until it reaches Elk City, the head of tide water and the head of the Yaquina river proper.

From there the road, although yet winding through a deep gorge, is comparatively level and without heavy grade. The scenery all through the Coast range is quite picturesque, and in many places approaches grandeur.

The road is very crooked but may be considered as very safe, and the road bed, while not fully settled yet, is very good for a new road. It was almost 8 o'clock when we reached Yaquina City, and our party at once went aboard the little side-wheel steamer Cleveland, and soon she was dashing the spray before her bow on her way to Newport.

Through the courtesy of Capt. Carl, your correspondent and a few of the young ladies in the party were accorded the pleasure of seats in the pilot house, from the windows of which, even though dusk was rapidly approaching, a very good view of the bay, and of the jetty, and the breakers dashing high on the bar, could be gleaned.

The weather was very stormy, rain (or rather "Oregon mist") falling dismally, and the ocean roaring wildly, made your correspondent's first impression of the bay anything but pleasant. We were soon at the hotel, however, and a good supper soon put all in a fairly good humor.

After supper, part of our party attended a "hop" at the hall here, but, as all were rather fatigued from our trip, the retirement of all, but your correspondent who "burned the midnight oil" in order that this letter might leave for home to-morrow, retired early.

To-morrow I will write you an extended letter regarding the bay and such of its surroundings as I may be able to visit.

We found Mrs. J. M. Rosenberg and child here, both in excellent health and apparently enjoying their stay among the "salt sea breezes." Among others registered at the Bay View house from the capital city, are Mrs. P. J. Armstrong, Misses Addie Scriber, Grace Scriber, Hallie Parrish, Lizzie Dearborn, Emilie Huclat, Theo Van Wagner, Leona Willis, Mrs. A. L. Coolidge, A. R. Flint, Miss Watson, James H. McAfee and wife, and Hon. E. B. McElroy. All are in good health and fairly good spirits.

The association opens at Yaquina City to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock. Well, I must close now. Until my next, au revoir. I. A. M.

Epithelioma! Or Skin Cancer. For seven years I suffered with a cancer on my face. All the simple remedies were applied to alleviate the pain, but the place continued to grow, finally extending into my eye, from which came a yellowish discharge very offensive in character. It was also inflamed, and annoyed me a great deal.

I had heard of the wonderful cures of Swift's Specific, and resolved to try it. I commenced taking it in April, 1884. My general health was much improved, yet the cancer which was in my breast continued to grow slowly but surely. The cancer grew and became quite heavy. I felt that I must either have it cut out, or die. But I commenced discharging quantities of almost black, thick blood. It continued being around my chest until February, when it was entirely healed up and well.
