Corporal John.

"Another man killed!" exclaimed Captain Duval. "The devil take those Mexican brigands. Why their mode of warfare is worse than anything I ever saw in Algiers!"

Captain Duval had won a medal as a gallant officer in the foreign legion, and had been transferred at his own request to Bazaine's command in Mexico. But in this new field of service he had won few laurels. Maximilian's ill-starred reign was nearing its end, and Captain Duval found himself fighting against overwhelming odds.

What galled the chivalric Frenchman more than anything else was the fact that this military education was worth little to him in this semi-barbarous land, where the people resorted to a bush-whacking warfare. On this scouting expedition into Sonora he had lost half of his men without once seeing the enemy. On the march, and around the camp-fire at night, the soldiers were picked off one by one by unseen sharpshooters, who seemed to defy discovery and pursuit. And now another man had been killed.

What was to be done?
"Send Corporal John to me," said the captain, coming to the door of his tent.

In a few moments Corporal John ap-peared. He was a stalwart young fellow, with an honest American face. His soldierly bearing was that of a veteran Although a mere youth, he had been trained in war's roughest school. At the downfall of the confederacy he had made his way across the Rio Grande, still wearing his faded gray jacket, and had joined Maximilian's army.

Corporal John wore his French uniform gracefully, but the lingo of his comrades was too much for him, and this made him a little uneasy in the presence of his captain.
"My American friend," said Duval,

"you have fought bushwhackers?"
"Yes, captain."

"And sharpshooters?"

"Yes, captain."
"And brigands?"

"Yes, Captain." "And all sorts of devils, I doubt not Well, then, Corporal John, what did you do with them when you caught them?"

This significant sound, made by a pe culiar workidg of the corporal's mouth, arrested the Frenchman's attention.

"Good!" he ejaculated. "You shoot them on the spot?" "We led them out in the bushes, said the corporal, "and lost them. And they were never found again. Click!"

"Very well," said Daval, with a satisfied look. "On the principle of setting a thief to eatch a thief, I propose to turn assassins over to you. On the march to-morrow take a few picked men and watch every suspicious place. If you find any human being in ambush with arms in his hands, shoot him. the case calls for investigation, it will be looked into later. Our first duty is self-preservation."

"It shall be done," replied Corporal John, as he retired.

But this prisoner, with his arm around the neck of his little mustang, was no ordinary bushwhacker. When the two soldiers seized him, Corporal John saw before him a boy of about 18, a handsome, spirited-looking youngster, in citi-zen's dress and armed with a light rifle. Trembling and flushing by turns, the prisoner flashed his black eyes defiantly, and cried out :

'Unhand me, senors! I will not submit to this outrage."

He spoke in Spanish, and the corporal understood the language much better than he did French. "Who are you, and what are you do ing here?" he asked sternly. The little Mexican drew himself up grimly. "I can't take two from the road present. Keep your eyes open." There was a protest from the others, but the corporal silenced them.

"I won't have any useless noise," he explained. "I'll take him to the river, cut his throat and throw him in. That will be the safest plan." Tying the hands of the prisoners he ed him through the thick undergrowth down to the muddy stream a hundred yards from the road. 'Senor

My mother fied into the swamps, where she died of fright and exposure. Well, I tell the truth. Since then my brother and I have been with the guerrillas, and we have done some good work. Do you blame me?"

Corporal John thought of a similar experience in his own case, when he was fighting for the confederacy. "No, I don't" he blurted out; "but I don't know whether you are telling the truth or a lie. I must obey orders." "But, senor, would you kill a woman -a girl?"

"No, I don't believe it would," was the corporal's thoughtful reply. Then set me free!'

"Hey?"

"Set me free!" "Hang me if I don't!" said the cor-oral. "Why, of course I will." He cut the prisoner's bonds and gave an inquiring look. "It is all right," responded the seno-"The stream is not so deep at this point. I am going to ford it, and on the other side of yonder hill my brother and his companions await me. When you return to your comrades, tell them that you did your duty. God bless you, senor, and farewell." Befere he could speak the senorita was half-way across the river. As she disappeared in the forest on the other side she waved her hand, and the corporal heartily responded.

"I am a great fool to fight a duel," said John Conway, as he finished his toilet and viewed his face in the glass, but when a fellow is in Paris he must do as the Parisians do." Conway gave an extra twist to his mustache, and continued talking to him-"It is strange. I fought through our war and was mixed up in the Maximilian business. I have done my share of shooting and being shot at, but I never yet stood up in cold blood to exchange shots with a man. I don't like it."

So many years had elapsed since Conway's military experience that the pros pect of a fight no longer stirred his blood. He was not an old man, but the fiery ardor of youth was a thing of the past. After years of adventurous speculation in the mining regions of the west, fortune had favored him, and for the first time in his life he was realizing one of the dreams of his youth, a visit to Paris. Unfortunately, he had been drawn into a political controversy in a cafe with a member of the Mexican Legation, Senor Gomez, a gentleman whose great wealth and beautiful wife were at that time the talk of Paris. In the heat of the discussion Conway had given mortal offense to the Mexican. The result was a challenge, and the American had accepted, selecting pistols and fixing the hour for 5 o'clock that afternoon, the place chosen being a suburban forest, notorious for its affairs of honor. While the American was wondering whether he had sufficient appetite for akfast there was a tap at Opening it he saw to his surprise Senor Gomez, who advanced into the room with a grave countenance, in which vari ous emotions were struggling for ex-

John Conway involuntarily fell back in amazement at beholding this unexpected visitor.

"Senor Conway," said Gomeze, "this visit under the circumstances is unheard of. It is irregular, but you Americans are always prepared for the unexpected. I am here, Senor, to apologize for my conduct, and to withdraw my challenge. I deeply regret my offensive language and hasten to retract it. It is my purpose to inform the gentlemen, who know something of the affair between us, that we have no quarrel, and that I regard you as one of the bravest and noblest of

"Listen!" exclaimed the other impatiently. "Last night at the opera my wife saw a face that recalled the greatest peril of her life. She studied it through her glass and became convinced that she was right. When she met me at our notel, after my return from the cale where we had our unfortunate difference, she told me all and begged me to search out her preservor. So, corporal John, I thank you in the name of my wife."

Then seeing that the American was

"Have you forgotten your capture of a young Mexican in Sonora when you were with Bazaine? Instead of obeying orders and executing the prisoner, her sex and her wrongs excited your sympathy and you released her."

"It all comes back to me," said Conway, excitedly. "Yes, it is impossible for me to forget it. And the senorita made good her escape and is now your You are to be congratulated, wife? Senor, upon securing such a heroine."

The two were now unconsciously clasping hands. 'You see that we cannot fight.' laughed Gomez, with a tear in his eye.
"Ridiculous," said Conway.
"Very well," remarked the other. "I take it for granted I may tell the senoral that you will spend the evening with us. You cannot refuse.

Corporal John did not refuse, but when the brilliant Mexican beauty overwhelmed him that evening with her thanks he grew very thoughtful. When his visit was over and he was on his way homeward the American several times broke

THE NATION'S CAPITAL.

"Ray" Writes a Few Words About Washington, and Its "Sessiety"---Personals.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 1. ED. STATESMAN:-To the philosophic individual, nothing is more amusing than the efforts of the average Washingtonian in behalf of a good time. And though their "decollity" dresses are conducive of bad morals and typhoid-pneumonia, the "sessiety" shakes hands and grins after the approved fashion. The fact that many Washington "banquets are spiced with the dust of death" does not seem to deter the people from their feasts. The festivities of one young lady, who was visiting the capital, began with Senator Logan's funeral and closed with that of Mrs. Voorhees, and yet she had a "perfectly lovely" time. Senator Dawes, who is an enthusiast on the Indian question, must have been a good deal dis gusted at the fact that a delegation of Sacs, Foxes, and Choctaws visited "Grover," and others, to oppose the land-inseveralty bill. Some of the department clerks seemed a good deal astonished at the Indian costume, but I doubt if any one was half so surprised as the Indians were themselves. A "Siwash" in warpaint and feathers is a valuable partisan for the sagacious stockman.

Senator Evarts is a thin, distinguished looking man, whose nose and chin meet, and who fully believes in the right of a congressman to practice in the supreme court. It was very droll to hear the dis cussion between him and "the gentleman from Mississippi" upon the subject. The last named person, arrayed in snuffcolored clothes, and adorned with a shaggy head and whiskers, suggested a common "yaller pup" holding his rightful bone against the attacks of a delicate thoroughbred greyhound. I heard a "cuttin" remark the other day about a very decollete society lady. She was "receiving" and her little six-year old consin had called with his "ma." As they were going out, he whispered "Muzzer, cousin Mamie is bu'erful, but she's forgot the waist-part of her lity.

Louis Blanding says the generally ac cepted statement that the largest nugget ever found in California was worth a little more than $21,000 is an erroneous one. He says that J. J. Finney, "Old Virginia," found a piece of gold about six miles from Downieville, Sierra county, on Aug. 21, 1886, that weighed 5,000 ounces. The gold of that vicinity was worth $18 per ounce, which would make the value of the nugget $90,000. would make the Finney nugget the largest piece of pure gold ever discovered, so far as accounts go. Heretofore the Australian nugget, found in the Ballarat gold fields, has been considered the largest. It was valued at $60,000. Finney, or, "Old Virginia," as he was familiarly called in those days, afterwards went to Washoe when the great silver discoveries were made there and from him the town of Virginia City took its name. "How many men in jail to-day?" we thus to the sheriff said, and he turned to his book with a troubled look and a shake of his manly head. "There's thirty-five, if they're all all we, down there for various crimes, and some for murder, and some for rape, but most for begging There's Richard Roe and Johnny Doe, too numerous to name. There's Bob O'Rafferty, Tim McCafferty, besides old Jim McClane; and lots of bums from all the slums of Colon, far away, who come by stealth to this land of wealth, from the city on the bay. And every cell, the tanks as well, are crowded full of men; and when they go, we treat them so, they come right back again. And every day, do all they may, it gets no better fast; for all our work they firmly shirk, and the trouble's growing vast when our wise men meet in their pen, and give us leave to do it, we'll make them moil, we'll make them toil, or else we'll make them rue it.
