THE PRESIDENT.

At Nashville and Atlanta—Acres of Enthusiasm.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 17.—The streets of the city are crowded as never before since the days of "Pap" Thomas' occupancy and decorated from cellar to crest in the richest manner. Mammoth pictures cover the fronts of the prominent buildings the banners nominating the guests of the day for a second term are thick as blackberries. The president and all the party at Bellemeade were early astir, and after leisurely breakfasting they made their way to the picturesque little railroad station upon the place and were in waiting with Gen. Jackson, their host, who wore the badges and regalia of the grand marshal of the day, when the special train backed up from Nashville. The governor and his guard, mounted and brilliantly uniformed, and the marshal and corps of assistant marshals were in attendance. The guests were driven to the fair grounds, where members of the committees and others of the reception were presented to the president. At 8:45 the procession formed and marched to the city. They began to the music of a presidential salute of artillery. The route lay through the fine grounds of the Vanderbilt university, and the pupils of the institution were drawn up in front of the university building, and as the president's carriage came up they received him with cheers. Chancellor Garland addressed the president, expressing the pleasure it gave all connected with the institution to welcome them. The students waived their hats and cheered again, and the march was resumed. The principal streets of the city were traversed, the populace of all grades and conditions being out upon the side walks. When the Maxwell House was reached Mrs. Cleveland and her escort alighted and entered the hotel, where she held a reception to the ladies of Nashville. The president and procession made their way to the capitol, where upon the stand erected for the purpose the necessary formalities took place. Governor Taylor's speech was brief but eloquent in the expression of the hospitality of this section. Upon conclusion of his address the president was reconducted to the rotunda of the capitol where he received the public.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 18.—The morning was cloudy, showing a possibility of rain. Trains are bringing in thousands of strangers, yet it is estimated that 6000 or 7000 of those here last night failed to find beds. The presidential party did not retire until 2 o'clock this morning, it having been found impossible to get their baggage through the crowds to their rooms earlier.

At 1 p. m. the president and vice-president of the exposition called and escorted the president and Mrs. Cleveland and Postmaster-General Vilas to the capitol where they were received by Governor Gordon and visiting governors. The supreme court of the state, members of the governor's staff, United States officials and municipal authorities and members of the legislature were presented to the city's guests. This ceremonial over, the distinguished visitors, escorted by Governor W. A. P. Gordon, Senators Brown and Colquitt and by the visiting governors and many other people of distinction, proceeded to the exposition grounds. A national salute was fired as the procession entered the gates of the inclosure and proceeded to the speaker's stand, where H. W. Grady, vice-president of the exposition, in a brief but eloquent speech extended a welcome to the president.

The president in reply gave a brief sketch of Atlanta's early history, rapid growth and terrible destruction during the war of the rebellion. "I have lately seen," he said, "evidences of the activity and perseverance of the people of the United States in the creation of prosperous and bustling cities, and in overcoming difficulties that are inseparable from new settlements and the growth of new cities, but it seems to me that an element of heroism is added by a people who view without despair the destruction of all they have wrought, and begin again to build their waste places and who, in spite of the greatest discouragement, evince a determination to reach their destiny. In twenty-two years the second Atlanta has been built, incomparable, larger, more prosperous and fairer than the destroyed Atlanta. Her place as first among the cities of a great state, her constantly increasing business and her large manufacturing interests are evidences of the courage and enterprise of her people. They may well be proud of the work of their hands. Nor shall the glory of their achievement be left to their sole gratification. All of their countrymen may congratulate themselves that this has been the result of American enterprise."

Section 5 of the constitution was amended in the sense that local assemblies must attach themselves to a state, district or national assembly. Mileage was fixed at four cents per mile. The explosion was attended with frightful injuries to a number of people, and great destruction to some of the finest property in the city. The concussions shook buildings for squares, and broke every plate-glass window in the block. Almost instantly flames shot up from various parts of the block, but before they gained much headway they were controlled by the prompt work of the fire department. Eight persons were seriously hurt, some of them fatally, and at least as many are slightly hurt.

IN MEMORIAM.

On last Thursday, Oct. 13th, sorrowing relatives and friends laid to rest in Twin Oak cemetery, near Turner, the remains of Mrs. Ida Staples. The sad intelligence of her death startled the community and fell with crushing weight upon her already deeply afflicted family. Everywhere in the vicinity of her home her loss is deeply deplored.

From childhood until her death she was ardent, generous and truthful. Naturally unselfish, she was ever seeking the good of others, rather than her own, and always possessed of a sanguine, happy temperament, she delighted in making others happy. Her highest aim seemed to be in doing good. During her sickness she manifested the sweet, patient disposition which always characterized her. She had a kind word and pleasant smile for all who visited her. She told me a few days prior to her death that she knew her family were alarmed about her, but she hoped unnecessarily. She spoke touchingly of her dear young husband; of his tender, watchful love and care of herself;—said the Saviour's love alone would sustain him if she were taken from him.

How sad it seems to see one so young, so full of promise and unselfishness, cut down in the bright spring time of life. Within a few brief weeks blooming health and life were exchanged for cold and icy death. To her bereaved family we tender our heartfelt sympathy. We will not attempt words of consolation; but let us join with them in a sincere sorrow for the loss we all sustain in her loss. We know that our Ida's real self has received the baptism of immortality, and when we beheld her in the last time on earth that womanly brow, calm and lovely in death, those beautiful words of the Peri were brought forcibly to mind:

"Go wing thy flight from star to star,
From world to luminous world, as air
As the universe spreads its flaming wall:
Take all the pleasures of all the spheres,
And multiply each through endless years,
One minute in Heaven is worth them all."

THE HOLLADAY WILL.

Judge Catlin Renders a Decision on a Motion to Strike Out.

PORTLAND, Or., Oct. 18.—Says this evening's Telegram: "This morning Judge Catlin rendered a decision on a motion argued before him a week ago yesterday, to strike out the petition of Mrs. Esther Holladay protesting against the appointment of Joseph Holladay as executor and Geo. W. Weidner as administrator of the estate of her late husband, Ben Holladay, and asking for the appointment of General Ingalls as administrator of that estate. The court sustained the motion on the grounds that the nomination of Joseph Holladay is a part of the will executed by the late Ben Holladay, and under the statute Judge Catlin is disqualified. Judge Catlin held that it seemed inconsistent for Joseph Holladay to act in the capacity of receiver and executor of the same estate, but that was a matter for the other courts to deal with. The court presumed to say that if Holladay elected to continue to act as executor he should relinquish the position of receiver. No order was entered, and the question as to whether or not Holladay should furnish bonds as executor will be argued at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning."

THE HOLLADAY WILL.

The Orders of Judge Catlin in Regard Thereto.

PORTLAND, Or., Oct. 19.—Says this evening's Telegram: "In the matter of the will case of the late Ben Holladay, this morning Judge Catlin held that under the existing condition of affairs he could not compel Joseph Holladay to furnish bonds at present. Under this ruling Holladay is permitted to hold the dual position of executor and receiver, despite the statement on the part of the court that the two positions are incompatible.

Judge Catlin made another order that an allowance of $500 per month, to date from the time of the death of Ben Holladay, July 8, 1887, be paid to Mrs. Esther Holladay, to continue until otherwise ordered by the court. It is further ordered that the money be paid to her monthly by the person nominated as trustee, or by George W. Weidner, out of the trust funds of the estate, provided whatever amount is paid the widow by the trustees or receiver shall be a credit on the above amount."

TO CHANGE HIS NAME.

A Portland Man Thinks His Present Name is too Common.

PORTLAND, Or., Oct. 19.—This evening's Telegram contains the following: "This morning William Frederick Brown, by his counsel Woodward & Woodward, filed a petition praying that his name be changed to William Frederick Brownston. The petitioner has been a resident of the city many years and has been engaged in active business, being the agent of large corporations, namely insurance companies, and he is the recipient of large correspondence of an important nature. The petitioner finds that there are a large number of men in this city and in the interior, in which Mr. Brown finds it necessary to do business, bearing the same name as he, by reason of which he continually experiences great inconvenience and loss to himself in his business."

That is the Way Terra Firma Showed Off at Petaluma.

STATE AND TERRITORIAL.

There are forty-four prisoners in the King county jail at Seattle, and there is said to be accommodations for only twenty of that number.

Capitalists propose to build a $50,000 hotel at Ashland, providing a sufficient bonus be raised by the town. An effort is also being made to get the matter undertaken by a joint stock company.

Latest advices from Smith river, says the Gold Beach Gazette, is to the effect that the tug Pelican, in attempting to enter the river, was thrown on the rocks, where she remained at last accounts.

The authorities of Klamath county have commenced suit against District Attorney Colvig, to recover the $600 he received by reason of the forfeiture of the Munz bail-bond. So says the Jacksonville Times.

The firemen of Dallas, Polk county, held a meeting Tuesday evening and appointed Tom Rowell, Prof. Robinson and Frank Coad a committee to make arrangements for the dedication of the new city hall, now completed.

Jacksonville Times: There is much travel between this and Klamath counties. Both the Rogue river and Ashland roads are lined with wagons. It is quite evident that these sections are not entirely independent of each other yet.

Measles among the Indians seem to be quite fatal, says the Port Townsend paper. Another Indian child died yesterday from measles of a very malignant type, complicated with pneumonia. The Indians belong to Vancouver's island.

Jean Smith, the man who stabbed Charles McKee, the timekeeper on the O. & W. T. road some time ago, was acquitted of the charge of assault with a dangerous weapon, before Justice Garrett Tuesday evening, says the East Oregonian.

Yakima Republic: The foundations of the new public school building and the new brick hotel are being laid, and the brick work will soon loom up. The new Sisters' school edifice is enclosed, three stories high, surmounted with a cupola and spire.

There is a furor raging over the country for hotel buildings, says an exchange. Portland wants one, Seattle is building, North Yakima is building, and even Milton, Oregon, is on the anxious seat for one. Portland wants a mammoth one, Seattle ditto.

Stock Inspector John Luce has started over Grant county inspecting every band of sheep in the county. There is a noticeable decrease in the number of afflicted bands during the past year, and by careful attention to the matter stockmen can keep their sheep clear of disease.

Benton Leader: The general merchandise store on the Siletz Indian agency, owned by Mrs. Chambers, was destroyed by fire of supposed incendiary origin on Tuesday night, Mrs. Chambers being away from home at the time. The amount of the loss is unknown; but it is supposed it will be quite heavy.

Tuesday Samuel Taylor and John Fay were seriously injured while working on Cavanaugh's new hotel at Edgwood by the giving way of the staging, says a Grant's Pass paper. Both fell twenty-five feet. Taylor had his right thigh broken and his right shoulder dislocated. Fay suffered a dislocation of the right ankle.

Wallows Chieftain: Mrs. D. C. Davis, of Prairie creek, will start east on a visit about the first of next month. Mrs. Davis crossed the plains from Tennessee in 1851, and has not seen the "folks at home" for nearly thirty-seven years. All old pioneers can appreciate the pleasures of a return over the route that in the '50s required a six months' journey.

At Long Valley, Idaho, last Saturday, John Swords killed Zenas Fry, a former mining partner. Swords, who surrendered himself Monday at Idaho City, claims the killing was justifiable. Fry bore the reputation of a "gun fighter," and, it is said, claimed the honor of killing the first rebel general slain in the war—Gen. Felix K. Zollicoffer, at Mill Springs, Ky., in 1861.

A TRICK OF SPEECH.

Tricks of speech grown into mannerisms often betray people into blunders absurd enough. One instance of this comes from a town in Maine, where dwelt a man who was qualified to reply to every question with the word "handy," twisted into some sort of a conditional clause. It was even asserted that he proposed to the lady who became his wife by declaring he would like to marry her "if she could make it handy," but this very likely is a fabrication of invidious gossips.

Calling recently at a house, of which the late master was lying unburied in the parlor, the visitor was asked if he would like to see the remains of his old friend.

"Well, yes," he answered, "that is, I'd like to see them if you've got 'em 'round handy. If you haven't, it's no matter."—Boston Courier.

ALL THE SAME.

"You don't mean to say that you had to pay just as much for your pew during the summer months when the church was closed as when it was open?"

"Certainly."

"How ridiculous!"

"Oh, I don't know; I don't begrudge the money. I enjoyed the pew quite as well as though I was in it; better, if anything."

MANCHESTER, Oct. 19.—The Guardian's commercial article says business in a few departments is moderate, but perhaps reaches average. Firmness and confidence prevail. Inquiry from Japan, China, and India has subsided. Sales of cloth are light, but prices are steady. The best China shirting is strong. Early delivery is impossible. Medium and common easier, though firm. Some inquiry exists for jaconets and mulls for Bombay. The best prints are firm, with good business for medium and lower.
