

Flag of World War 1 Waves at Camp Adair

Banner Floated Over Immortal AEF Places

Camp Adair has the gift of an American flag, 20 feet by 10, which went all through World War No. 1 and will be displayed here on special occasions as the enduring symbol of victory.

The flag was presented to Col. Gordon H. McCoy, post commander, by Major Walter R. LaLonde, inspector, general construction, U.S. Engineer Dept., Camp Adair.

"This gesture has been possible," says Major LaLonde in his letter to Col. McCoy, "through a line of thought that a flag which has seen active service in World War No. 1 should have an appropriate display for further victories of our forces.

"The flag was presented May 4th, 1917, by the Women's Relief corps of Ricerlake, Wisconsin, to Major W. R. LaLonde, Engineers, U.S.A., A.E.F., France.

"It has floated in the breeze of our national capital, at St. Nazaire, French port of embarkation, and it was carried with the A.E.F. to Sedan, finally flying over the zone of occupation at Coblenz, Germany.

"Here's to our flag, and its history will repeat itself."

Major LaLonde, who was with the 2nd division in the other war, wishes that he could take the field with the flag again, but instead has been busy building this camp.

"I'm 63," he said, "and too old, they say. But it will do me good to see the old flag flying again at another headquarters, as it flew at regimental headquarters at Sedan and elsewhere. All these years the flag has been in my field locker at Portland, my home, except on a few occasions, such as Decoration day and Independence day, and the flag also went to American Legion conventions.

"This flag has been seen flying at Chateau-Thierry and Soissons and other places with immortal names. I know that will be appreciated here."

36 Men—No Softies— Seeing (?) the World

Two trucks carried a detail of 36 men from Camp Adair to Crater Lake, on Tuesday, and there wasn't a goldbrick in a truck-load. It consisted of carpenters, plumbers and men noted for hard and efficient work. They came from Hdq. Co., M. P. and Q.M., were led by Sgt. Spencer L. Austin, Q.M., and had the task of taking apart a CCC camp and bringing to Camp Adair whatever might be of value to the Army.

As is usual with military movements, this one was shrouded in mystery. Some said they would be away 10 days, others said three months or for the duration. All that's asked by the men who didn't go is that the members of the joy-riding detail refrain from sending back a lot of those impossibly blue picture cards of Crater Lake, with "Wish you were here" scrawled on them. That would be too much.

Here's Opportunity To Rate That Salute

Officer Candidate Schools for the training of administrative officers will be opened shortly. Branches of the school will be located at civilian educational institutions. Classes of approximately 450 candidates will be enrolled bi-weekly sometime after September 15.

Qualifications for the administrative schools are similar to those required for other Officer Candidate Schools. Two differences are that soldiers, who meet physical standards required of limited service officers, will be eligible for attendance at the school—also the emphasis on leadership is removed. Educational background will be a favorable factor in the selection of candidates, as will civilian training and experience. Soldiers who wish to apply can obtain blanks at the Officer's Section in the Headquarters Administration building.

Soldier! Check Over That Insurance Policy

Most accident and health insurance policies contain provisions which exclude any coverage while the insured is engaged in military service in time of war.

A warning to that effect has been issued by the War Dept., which now directs "commanding officers of all units to bring it to the attention of all members of their respective units, to the end that individual policy holders may determine from their insurance company or insurance agent what protection they enjoy, if any, and to what reimbursement they may be entitled."

Insurance companies have made varied announcements, some saying that policies will be cancelled pro rata only upon departure of policy holders from the United States and offering suspension of premiums or refunds for periods when no protection was offered.
