

Major Osborn Comes Out Against K.P. As Penalty—Calling It Unfair to Cooks

"It is unfair to punish men by putting them on kitchen police." With that ringing declaration of principle, Major Josiah J. Osborn, assistant commandant of the Ninth Service Command School for Bakers and Cooks, today appeals through the Camp Adair Sentry, for a stop to the vicious practice.

But don't get the major wrong. He isn't sympathizing with the gold bricks and bad actors who are given K.P. as a penalty. "I mean," he explained, "that it is unfair to punish the cooks that way, because they are the ones who get punished—they and the rest of the outfit. Aside from that, the practice is bad because it lowers the status of K.P. in the eyes of the world and detracts from the dignity of K.P."

"Sir, did you say 'dignity'?" "Certainly, K.P. is a duty. Nay, more, a privilege. It gives a soldier a chance to see how the food is prepared and to check up on the cleanliness of the kitchen."

But how are the cooks punished, and the rest of the outfit, when K.P. is looked on as a penalty?

"That's easy," said the major. "By and large the men who get punished are poor soldiers. They are A.W.O.L. from the kitchen and the harassed cooks have to go on K.P. hunts. They are apt to be slovenly and careless, so that the cooks must watch them to see that they perform their duties properly and keep the food clean. They damage food and waste it. They peel the potatoes to ribbons and they break dishes."

And how about the rest of the outfit, sir? How do the other soldiers suffer when K.P. is a punishment?

"That should be clear, too. Men who are punished are likely to be sullen. In fact it's the sullen type of soldier who gets punished in the first place. Such men grow more and more sullen as the day wears on, and they take it out on everybody around them. Therefore in the mess hall, where all should be sweetness and light, and where there should be a friendly home atmosphere to make up for any lack of such pies as mother used to make, you have frowning brows, bitter remarks, a mood of ill will. That is bad for the digestion."

"When a soldier is in the mess hall he doesn't want to feel that the kitchen police are only interested in how soon they can get him out of there. He likes light banter and engaging talk and good cheer. So the kitchen police should be men who take pride in doing the best they can. They should not consider themselves prisoners, serving out a sentence."

Major Osborn looked sad when it was remarked that K.P. is often given as a penalty, in this camp, and that a threat of K.P. corresponds with a mother's threat of a spanking, if a child won't behave.

"I know, I know," said the major, "but in the older outfits, skilled in promoting morale, K.P. comes to a man in line of duty and never as a penalty."

The major is a veteran of World War No. 1. In 1915 he joined the Canadian Army, because he "wanted to see what war was like," and he served with the infantry and a tunnelling company which helped to mine Hill No. 60, on the Belgian border. That hill blew up in 1917. Later he was with the 41st and 42nd American divisions. He wears three battle clasps. Following the war he was with our infantry in China and Alaska and has run a Seattle restaurant and been a C.C.C. commanding officer.

Capt. Hugh W. Jones Upped to Majority

104th Div. Med. Off. Has Envious Record

The appointment from Captain to Major of Hugh Warren Jones in the medical corps, 104th division, has been announced by the war department.

Particularly rapid has been progress of the young major (he is 27), since his appointment in the regular army Feb. 14, 1940, at the army-navy hospital, Hot Springs, Ark. To digress:

It all began in Kansas City, Mo., where Hugh Warren Jones was born on Jan. 25, 1915. His boyhood, however, was spent at Helena, Ark., and on completion of regular schooling Jones attended the University of Arkansas where he earned both his bachelor of science and medical degrees.

He served his internship at Vassar Hospital. There romance winged in, Jones met and loved a pretty nurse. The officer-to-be from Helena, Ark., and the girl (Marjorie Leggett) of Burlington, Vt., were married—in St. Louis. And they've traveled much since. Because—

Major Jones has served at many stations since his first army appointment and until he came to Camp Adair on August 12. From Hot Springs he went to Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga.; thence, to Army Medical School at Washington, D. C.; to Army Medical Field Service School at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.; to Station Hospital, Camp Forrest, Tenn.; to 9th inf. division at Camp Barkley, Texas. Then, on to Camp Adair.

WANTNA' RIDE? Cpl. D. Kitrina, post motor pool, is anxious to contact anyone in need of daily transportation between Albany and Camp Adair. The corporal has accommodations for four passengers and can be contacted by dialing 1911.

Company Turns Out For Capri's Wedding

"I'm in a wonderful outfit," says Pfc. George Capri. A fellow does feel that way when the entire outfit turns out for his wedding, although he has been in camp only three weeks.

Miss Patricia O'Hare and the private first class were married by Chaplain Alf W. Jorgensen, at a double-ring ceremony last Friday, in Post Chapel No. 1. Lt. Aaron M. Schandler, the bridegroom's commanding officer, gave the bride away and Mrs. Schandler, wife of Vancouver, was maid of honor and William Capri, the soldier's brother, was best man. He flew from Vancouver to attend the wedding.

Bride and bridegroom lived in Los Angeles and have been acquainted four years. Pfc. Capri was in the brokerage commission business. After a wedding reception in the company mess hall, Pfc. and Mrs. Capri flew to Seattle for a weekend honeymoon.

Oh yes, the bride, who is 22, wore a silver fox costume suit and the bridegroom, 36, in the service since September 26, and now attached to the 96th Infantry Division here, wore the conventional olive drab.

Lt. Joe K. Ellsworth Promoted to Captain

Post Sanitary Officer Has Filled Many Rolls

Promotion of 1st Lt. Joe Koebele Ellsworth, chief sanitary officer of the post, to captain, was announced this week. Capt. Ellsworth reported to Camp Adair from the Hunter Liggett Military Reservation at Jolon, California, last July.

Captain Ellsworth, a graduate of the University of California, has served in numerous capacities since being commissioned a 2nd lieutenant in the infantry reserves in 1929. After several periods of active duty with the 30th inf. at the Presidio of San Francisco, he was transferred to the rents and claims board at Ft. Lewis in July 1940. In October of that year he was sent to the heavy weapons service school at Ft. Benning, Ga., and upon finishing in January, 1941, was sent back to Ft. Lewis as assistant G-2 of the third division.

Later he was assigned to the 15th infantry as assistant S-3 and on October 1st, 1941, was appointed third division morale officer. Upon being promoted to 1st lieutenant, he was made assistant post sanitary officer at Ft. Lewis.

Capt. Ellsworth holds both bachelor of science and master of science degrees as well as a doctor of philosophy degree at the University of California. He is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Sigma Xi, Gamma Alpha, Alpha Zeta and Phi Sigma fraternities. His professional memberships include the Parasitologists Society of America, the Entomological Society of America and the Society of Economic Entomologists.

"We've lost everything except a smug sense of complacency," said Lieutenant General Brechon H. Somervell, commanding Services of Supply, "and that's one thing we've got to lose and lose fast or we'll lose our independence."

HERE IT IS AGAIN!

Even the WAACs, it seems, fail to appreciate the privilege of being on kitchen police. They sang this parody of the old war song, "K-K-Katie," recently in the Grand Central Terminal, New York City, where the acoustics are superb:

"K-K-K. P. K-K-K. P. That's the only Army job that I abhor. When the moon shines Over the garbage, I'll be mopping up the dirty kitchen floor."

CHAPLAIN'S COLUMN

Post Chaplain Lloyd V. Harmon left yesterday for an additional course at the Chaplains' school at Harvard university. After an abiding university, The Chaplain expects to return about the middle of December.

Several Camp Adair chaplains, together with members of their families and friends, were honored last Sunday evening at a reception in the Federated Churches, Corvallis. The function was sponsored by the Association of Federated Women, headed by Mrs. Charles W. Smith. The arrangements were planned by Mrs. J. W. Riley, Mrs. R. M. Peffer, Mrs. A. L. Keeney and Mrs. W. M. Adrien, the latter being the new church hostess for service men.

The chaplains who were guests of honor, included Lt. Col. Gail Cleland, Lt. Col. Frank J. Worthington, Lt. Charles O. Churchill and Lt. Paul Walker.

Both church members and service men participated in the informal occasion, which was held in the new recreation rooms of the church.

The initial rehearsal of the men's chorus was held last Monday evening at Post Chapel No. 1, Avenue D and 3rd Street North. About 16 attended but more voices are essential to the success of this group. All those interested are urged to attend the next meeting on Monday, November 2, at 1900 at the Post Chapel.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

"Everlasting Punishment" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, Nov. 1. The Golden Text will be, "My son, despise not the chastening of the Lord; neither be weary of his correction: for whom the Lord loveth he correcteth; even as a father the son in whom he delighteth" (Prov. 3:11,12).

Among the citations which will comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring for ever: the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether" (Ps. 19:8,9).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Truth, Life, and Love are the only legitimate and eternal demands on man, and they are spiritual lawgivers, enforcing obedience through divine statutes. Controlled by the divine intelligence, man is harmonious and eternal. Whatever is governed by a false belief is discordant and mortal" (p. 184).

That disturbing element, the corporal who told Chaplain Lloyd V. Harmon that he considered Joseph unchivalrous for resisting the blandishments of Potiphar's wife, back in ancient Egypt, showed up again at Sunday School.

The lesson was about strong drink, and the chaplain wished that everybody could be made aware of the harm it would do him.

"But most people seem quite unharmed by it," the corporal broke in. "The drinkers include many of the most successful and delightful people in the world and they live long and usefully and give no trouble."

(The others present turned and looked at the corporal with abhorrence. Who was the set? Had he even come drunk to Sunday School?)

The chaplain decided to ignore him and discussed the subject of education, suggesting that it was ignorance of the facts which accounted for much of the drinking. But the corporal wouldn't keep still.

"The fact is, sir," he said, "that the highly intelligent, well-balanced people are the ones who are most set against prohibition. Take the officers in this camp. In the main they are against prohibition and even approve of moderate drinking, and their level of schooling and intelligence is certainly high.

(The others, consisting of enlisted men, fairly glared at the corporal. Clearly, he was not only a chronic drunkard. He was also a traitor to his class.)

The chaplain tried a new tack. He said that chronic drinkers were escapists, who couldn't face their troubles and therefore resorted to liquor. Or at least they were not emotionally normal.

But the corporal could find an opening anywhere. "That's one side," he remarked, "but the other day a doctor of high standing said there was something wrong with men who didn't drink at all. They were timid, he said, not sure of themselves. In fact he practically called them cowards."

(The class glared some more and grew restive, and there were murmurs of "Throw the drunk out.")

"Well, I think there's something in that," the corporal went on, "because I know it is so with me. In my opinion there should be some restriction, for the sake of persons like myself. Especially in war time, when the nation's full energy is needed, the people who can drink or let it alone should join forces to bring about some restriction, for the benefit of fellows who are harmed by drinking."

"Drinking has hurt other members of my family. It might hurt me. So I'm real cowardly and never drink at all."

(The class looked around in outraged amazement. Why the about-facing hypocrite of a corporal, pretending to be on the side of the angels?)

Sunday School broke up and the chaplain handed out a leaflet reading: "The United States is the

Gordon's Slump Goes on Even During Deer Hunt

Joe Gordon, New York Yankee second baseman, is still in a hitting slump, friends declared in Bend, Ore., this week when Gordon returned from a hunting trip into south-central Oregon without a deer.

There was one deer in the party, but the buck was bagged by Laddie Gale, not Gordon. Gale got a 200-pound buck.

Although Gordon was unable to down a buck, he turned in a good percentage of his shots at ducks, geese and pheasants. Waterfowl
