

Present Certificates To 16 at Field House

Men Finish Instruction Chem. Defense Work

Certificates of Proficiency were presented to 16 men, Saturday at Field House, as indicating that they had satisfactorily completed a course of instruction in defense against chemical attack and were considered qualified to perform the duties of unit gas noncommissioned officer.

Major Victor N. Miller, post adjutant, presented the certificates, representing Col. Gordon H. McCoy, post commander, who was unable to be present. Major Miller spoke briefly, as did Major Earl F. Armstrong, chemical officer, who had given the course. Both emphasized the importance of thorough training as the best protection in case the enemy used gas. They remarked that the certificates meant only that the recipients had completed a 30-hour course. They were expected to go on with their study and drill and be ready to instruct troops at any time.

Subjects in the course included chemical warfare agents, protection, first aid, decontamination, chemical intelligence, weapons, tactics, training, duties of gas officers and noncommissioned officers.

Those receiving certificates were as follows: QM—S/Sgt. Robert Jackson, Sgt. Oscar K. Crone, Sgt. Albert H. Koester.

Hdq. Co.—S/Sgt. Jerome Iverson, Sgt. Fred F. Lipscomb, Sgt. Henry Beckett, Sgt. Stanley F. Adams, Cpl. Ralph M. Salvano, T/5 Charles M. Craig, Pvt. Craig A. Marling, Pvt. Charles P. Falich.

MP—Sgt. William Springer. Medics—S/Sgt. Albert Levin, Cpl. Irving C. Lystad, Cpl. William C. Wennes, Cpl. Wilfrid de Tonnancourt.

Capt. John B. Riordan, with map and pointer to aid him, explains to a group of officers one aspect of handling a regimental train in a bivouac area. Governor Charles A. Sprague was present at this demonstration, as the guest of Major General G. R. Cook and staff. The problem was worked out with all manner of army vehicles camouflaged and troops working under cover at the huge task.

Sales Commissary Is Opened Here Tuesday

Eligibility and Methods Needed For Purchasing Goods, Outlined

Something new and welcome as sunshine in the morning has been added at Camp Adair. On Tuesday the Sales Commissary store opened for business, under the direction of Sales Officer, Capt. Kenneth Horne, assisted by Lt. Wesley P. Herrmann and Lt. Bill N. McFarland.

The "Sales Store" (Bldg. T-4-321), is located at Ave. I and 1st St. N., northeast of Headquarters building.

At "Sales Store," as explained by Lt. Herrmann, foodstuffs and other merchandise will be sold to army authorized personnel. No personal checks can be cashed in the store.

As to personnel who can buy: (1) Enlisted men may purchase toilet articles, tobacco and cigarettes. No privilege card is necessary; your uniform is your pass. (2) Married men, or men with dependents may, in addition, purchase provisions upon displaying privilege cards.

Privilege card, he explained, must be obtained at Sales Store and must be obtained personally by the officer or enlisted man eligible to purchase.

Any man of enlisted personnel who obtains a privilege card must first prove his eligibility and obtain written authorization to request it, from his company commander.

All transactions will be cash; credit will not be extended.

Wives or dependents of authorized army personnel may obtain merchandise by displaying privilege cards.

The Sales Commissary store, which is a subsidiary of the Field Commissary, will be open daily—from 0830 until 1115 and from 1300 until 1430—except on Sundays and holidays and the last working day of each month.

Cooking With Gas

By T/5 Roland C. Rogers Of Cooks and Bakers School

Under pressure of last week's skyrocketing enrollments, the School for Bakers and Cooks has expanded its training facilities. A new instructor has been added to the teaching staff. A new mess sergeant's course has been organized. The last available classroom has been pressed into use.

The new instructor, T/3 Leo T. (Popcorn) Picone, began his tour of duty with the Camp Adair branch Friday, after 23 months of service with the Ft. Lewis sub-school.

"Popcorn" Picone is an experienced dinner cook, boasting proficiency in the preparation of a long list of tasty special dishes. But in the Army T/3 Picone restricts himself to strictly GI dishes.

Registration went into high gear Wednesday when 256 new students were enrolled by the school. This is the largest single group of students to begin training at one time since the founding of the school last August. The midweek enrollment figure included 131 mess sergeants, 50 student mess sergeants and 75 cooks.

The 50 student mess sergeants are members of the first mess sergeants' classes conducted by the school. Classrooms now bulge with students daily.

ARMISTICE DAY

By Sgt. C. H. Wolfsberger
This is the day when such men as I
Look far away to the eastern sky
And dream of another November day
With rumbling guns in the distant gray,
Lying out there in the muddy grass
With morning air all filled with gas,
Trying in vain the distance to scan—
More an animal than a man.
Then, of a sudden, an hour before noon,
A silence not to be forgotten soon,
A silence so strange that it didn't seem real
A silence so awful you almost could feel;
And heads started popping over each mound
Of dirt, and there wasn't an earthly sound,
And we on the front, all were resigned
That all too late was the Armistice signed.
And so today, on the pavement,
The marcher's slow tread
Echoes to me again—the steps of our dead
And their voices come back to me from the grave;
"Oh, forget not today that our all we gave
That people stay free, and happy and gay,
Yet remember their dead, on this Armistice Day."

Army Wife Problem Discussed at Panel

Officers' Wives Will Schedule Meetings

Major General G. R. Cook and several members of his staff constituted the panel at a discussion entitled "Army Wife Be Wise," Monday at the USO in Salem.

With General Cook, as a commanding general, were Major John W. Bonner, judge advocate and formerly attorney general of Montana; Major Leo W. Belcher, finance officer; and Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Frank J. Worthington.

The purpose of this and other meetings of the kind is to inform officers and wives of the measures that may be taken for the security of home and family, during the war. General Cook has been most solicitous about this and he wishes to express his thanks for the hospitality of Salem and other communities in making the meetings possible.

In a letter to wives of the officers in the command Chaplain L. T. Jenks raised the following questions:

"Are you provided with the proper legal papers to move furniture, secure transportation, and to receive pay allotments, in case your husband is transferred to foreign duty?"

"Are you provided with the proper legal papers to prove your right to a pension, insurance, six months pay, guardianship of your children, in case your husband is reported a casualty?"

Such questions were discussed at Salem and specifically the panel considered allotments, the six months' gratuity pay for dependents, arrears of pay and allowances, pension, national life insurance, commercial insurance, wills, transportation of dependents and household goods, joint ownership and power of attorney.

"The army wife should have her own birth certificate," the chaplain's letter, "birth certificate of each child; proof of marriage (the certificate given by the minister is not legal proof of the marriage); if divorced, a certificate copy of the public record of the divorce proceedings; knowledge of the location of all property and papers, and the business affairs that relate to the family."

As an example of privileges accorded an officer's family, there is this provision for transportation: "In case an officer is ordered to duty outside the continental U. S., the quartermaster will pack and ship his household goods and transport his dependents to any designated point in the U. S. Make your plans now and know what you want to do."

At this meeting the wives of officers decided to form a permanent organization.

Provost Marshal Gets New Two-Way Radio

Not every MP is a Superman, regardless of what these soldier cops may think. But they've recently installed a two-way radio rig in the provost marshal's office that's so depressingly efficient that many a wayward soldier will credit the MP's with superhuman powers.

The radio set-up includes both transmitter and receiver. The receiver is constantly tuned to the state police station in Salem and to the various state police scout cars. The transmitter has sufficient power to reach Salem and the cars in return. Soldiers who have gotten in trouble in neighboring towns have been surprised by the speed with which they have found themselves safe in the care of the MP's and headed back for camp. "It's all done with the radio," says Pfc. Burton Larson, who operates the rig. The police let us know over the air and we do the rest. It's quick and efficient." Sorry, soldier—but Larson is right. The MP's are getting too efficient. The future takes on a gloomy outlook. Still Timely Asked about his plan of campaign General "Stonewall" Jackson countered: "Can you keep a secret?" "Yes," said his questioner. "So can I," said the general.
