

Chemical Warfare's Instructions Issued

Camp Office Advises Men on Gas Defense

An illustrated leaflet of instructions, in case troops of Camp Adair have chemical warfare agents used against them, is being issued by the Chemical Warfare Property Office, headed by Major E. F. Armstrong.

The illustrations are sketches done by Pfc. Donald Lynch and they show a soldier putting on the mask, getting out of a gassed area, etc., in line with the instructions, as follows:

"If the Japs use gas: Shut your eyes—stop breathing—put on your mask. In an airplane spray attack get under your raincoat, shelter half or any other shelter.

"If vesicants are breathed—get out of the gassed area and remain quiet—until evacuated by medical men. But if it is a lung irritant only, like phosgene, just put on your mask and remain quiet where you are—the gas will blow away.

"If gas gets in your eyes, have a medical man wash your eyes with borie acid or bicarbonate of soda solution.

"Areas subjected to gas attacks may absorb vesicants—contact with such areas may cause burns or blistering.

"Remove contaminated clothing at once . . . outside of the gassed area, of course.

"Use rag, handkerchief or any other material that has not been contaminated . . . Blot, don't rub.

"Use protective ointment. Rub in immediately (You carry it in your mask carrier) with your hand, remove it with cloth, then rub on again and leave it. If you have no ointment dab on no-corrosive decor, agent, or gasoline, oil, automobile extinguisher fluid (Pyrene) or a solution of chloride of lime. Then wash with water and GI soap.

"Test for gas . . . Insert two fingers in side of mask—take moderate breath then clear mask. Caution—when testing be careful not to allow equipment to touch the ground."

Get Hot, Nick!

Cpl. D. Atley Reports About Private V. Ivich

Pvt. Vladislav Ivich, who for two years had a restaurant in Brooklyn, now has the same job in our army as he used to have in the Italian navy. He is on duty at the officers' mess in the artillery of the Timber Wolf Division.

On this job he is impressed by the quantity and quality of the food, as compared with what the Italian officers had. The usual Italian breakfast, he says, was bread and coffee.

Ivich was born in the town of Molcalvo-Pisino, near Trieste, and he is of Austrian ancestry, but that place was proclaimed part of Italy after World War No. 1 and he was drafted into the Italian navy between 1929 and 1932.

He served as an attendant in the officers' mess on two large Italian vessels in the Mediterranean Sea. One was the Taranto, similar to an American battleship, Ivich remembers, and the other was the St. George, more like an American cruiser.

Two years ago Ivich came to the United States and busied himself in trying to get together enough money to bring his wife and small son to the United States. Since the war began, Ivich has had no word of his family. He has cabled Christmas greetings and hopes for an answer. He isn't yet a citizen and is eager to become one.
