

General Rodes New 70th Div's Head

(Continued from Page 1)

Riley, Kansas, in July, 1942.

He has attended the Battery Officers' course at Fort Sill, Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, and the Army War College at Washington, D. C.

The new commander, who is nationally known as an athlete, attended high school at Lexington, Kentucky, his birthplace and went to the University of Kentucky.

In 1909 he entered the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, where he played on the Navy football team for three years.

He resigned from the navy in 1913 and went into business in Kentucky until the outbreak of the war in 1917, when he went into training at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

Following his commission as captain in the field artillery in November, 1917, he was assigned to the 90th Division and served with this organization overseas.

He remained in the Army of Occupation from December, 1918, to June, 1919, and was promoted to major in April, 1919.

Following his return to the United States he was appointed a captain in the Regular Army July 1, 1920, and since has served with the Third Field Artillery, 14th Field Artillery, 16th Field Artillery.

During the period 1925 to 1930, Gen. Rodes played on the U. S. Army polo team, and was a member of the team that defeated the British in 1925 in London, and Argentina in Buenos Aires in 1930.

He played on the Army Meadowbrook team in 1926, won the junior handicap in 1925 at Rumson, New Jersey, and Meadowbrook in 1930.

Second only to the Army is Gen. Rode's interest in sports. Throughout his career he has kept in top physical condition the year around, and is regarded as one of the most active and energetic officers in the artillery.

Gen. Rodes is married and has three daughters. His family will arrive shortly and will make their home in one of the nearby cities.

Post Headquarters is located on Avenue F between 1st Street North and 1st Street South.

Well, Swami, What Does the Crystal Ball Say?

LT. COL. PEARSON, G-2 (intelligence officer, to you) of the Timber Wolf Division, gazes smilingly and speculatively into the crystal ball as he ponders weightily upon the morrow's problems which the men of the Division will encounter in their pre-manuever exercises in the Bend region of Eastern Oregon.—Sentry photo.

Army Ground Forces Chief Visits Adair

(Continued from Page 1)

the 96th division; Major General John E. Dahlquist, commanding general of the 70th Division; Major General A. M. Patch, commanding general of the IV Corps, who came here from his headquarters in Fort Lewis; and Colonel Gordon H. McCoy, Post Commander.

General McNair graduated from West Point in the class of 1904 and rose rapidly to the rank of Brigadier General in World War I.

The general wears the Distinguished Service Medal.

Other members of General McNair's party included Col. G. H. Carpenter, Col. S. E. Fair, Col. Wm. B. Forse, Col. J. B. Edmunds, Col. Chas. Bryan, Col. E. F. Olsen, Col. W. E. Shamborn, Lt. Col. B. Hamlett, Lt. Col. John Lemp and Maj. L. C. Gilbert.

The general's party, travelling by air, flew east to inspect the manuever area in central Oregon upon leaving Camp Adair.

"Chubby" Mammano (Sgt. to you), pride of the 4th Bks., is now sporting a big-banded index finger on his right hand.

He won't talk.

Scandals of Geo. White Center by Sgt. M. H. Rupp

Among other things, there's one lesson Sgt. Milton H. Rupp learned, much to his embarrassment, when he accompanied the 70th Division last week to Portland to participate in that city's "This Is the Army" program.

He'll no longer tell his friends here and in St. Louis, Mo., when he's praising the hospitality of the George White Servicemen's Center, why, and for whom, he thought the Portland "home away from camp" was named. Because now he knows the true story.

This popular place was named for the late Major General George White, former commander of the Oregon National Guard and one of this state's outstanding figures for many years.

Camp White, located near Medford, Ore., is also named after him.

But Sgt. Rupp believed a different version.

He expressed his amazement to one of the charming hostesses serving him that a man who operated night clubs in Hollywood and in New York City should have a service center named for him in Portland and how he could keep it going.

And Rupp wondered if all the beautiful glamour girls working for him helped to pay for all the free things he and other soldiers received.

After getting the hostess' explanation, Sgt. Rupp exclaimed: "Why, I thought this place was named after George White's Scandals, or, rather, the guy who owns the show!"

(Incidentally, it is operated and paid for entirely by the City of Portland. It has no connection with the USO.)

Ex-Sentry Editors Make Grade in OCS, Yippee!

The 27th officers' candidate class of the QM School at Camp Lee, Va., graduated and received their bars at exercises held August 18.

So what, say ye?

So, two former Sentry editors, James O'Connell and L. R. Black, were in that class. We're proud of them!

Brigadier General Walter L. Weible, director of training for the Army Service Forces, gave the class a code-word motto for their training careers.

"I give you RHIR—rank has its responsibilities," the speaker said, as he urged all the new lieutenants to perform their duties ably.

70th Division Fillers Arriving; Cadre Busy

DEAR, DEER!

Al Averil, who brings you your morning paper every day, had an interesting experience the other morning.

Driving down Avenue B (long before the sun was up) he spotted a doe grazing along the side of the road.

It was the first time he had seen a deer in the main portion of the reservation, although it is reported that there are a lot in some of the wilder parts of Camp Adair.

He wonders if some GIs were trying to work up a venison dinner in lieu of their less varied regular diet.

(Continued from Page 1)

ly-inducted privates to their new quarters, classifying and assigning them to their companies and units, and orienting them with their new life in Camp Adair.

The State of Oregon, in which the 70th Division was born and is maturing as "Oregon's Own," will be well represented by her native sons by the time the roster is complete.

Already many of them are actively engaged in combat training here, with several hundred more expected to arrive within the next few weeks.

The huge job of classifying and assigning the fillers is being conducted in the Field House under the direction of Major Elmer J. Willson, G-1 of the Trailblazers, and Lt. John J. Agoa, Division Classification Officer.

A special, additional activation ceremony, which will include the appearance of several military and civilian notables, has been planned for an unannounced date shortly after the Trailblazers have been brought to full strength and are ready to function as a compact organization.

Retreat to Honor Lt. Adair, Military Hero

(Continued from Page 1)

clude a formal retreat and review of troops, at which time the presentation will be made.

Sen. Charles L. McNary and other members of the Oregon Congressional delegation, Gov. Earl Snell and other state officials, mayors of several Oregon cities, and other prominent civic leaders have been invited as special guests for the occasion.

Camp Adair will hold "open house" for the public that afternoon, and installations such as the huge, modern bakery, the efficient laundry, recreation facilities and others will be open for inspection.

Arrangements for the gift of the equipment and apparel of Lt. Adair to the Post were made by Sidney Burt, of Corvallis, and Capt. Joseph Herron, of the Area Engineers, who discussed the matter with Mr. Adair.

At their suggestion, the offer of the presentation was made by Mr. Adair, and it was gratefully accepted by Col. McCoy.

Lt. Adair, who was born in Astoria, is one of the great military heroes of the United States Army.

He was killed in the Battle of Carrizal, in Mexico, June 21, 1916, after personally accounting for at least 15 Mexicans. At the time, he had no weapons except his revolver and that of his orderly.

His famous words, uttered as he lay dying, "Go on, sergeant!" rank with other great sayings of famed military heroes.

As a feature of the event, the September 3 issue of the Sentry will be dedicated to Lt. Adair, and it will carry a full account of his life and career, as well as illustrations of the gift.

You may send your family the Sentry. Subscription rates: six months, $1.00; a year, $1.50.

Congressman Ellsworth to Review SCU Troops Wed.

(Continued from Page 1)

During the past year in Congress he has been placed on important committees and has received praise for the statesmanlike manner in which he has conducted his office.

Before taking charge of the newspaper in Roseburg, Congressman Ellsworth was manager of the Oregon Newspaper Publishers' Association and a professor of journalism at the University of Oregon.

While on the post, Congressman Ellsworth and Mrs. Ellsworth will be the guests of Captain George H. Godfrey, Post Public Relations Officer.

Other guests for the occasion will be the Hon. Robert S. Farrell, Jr., Oregon's Secretary of State, and Mrs. Farrell, and Harry Schenk, Chief Deputy Secretary of State, and Mrs. Schenk.

Congressman Ellsworth and Captain Godfrey were classmates at the University of Oregon, and later served on the journalism faculty there together.

CLASSICAL MUSIC CONCERT

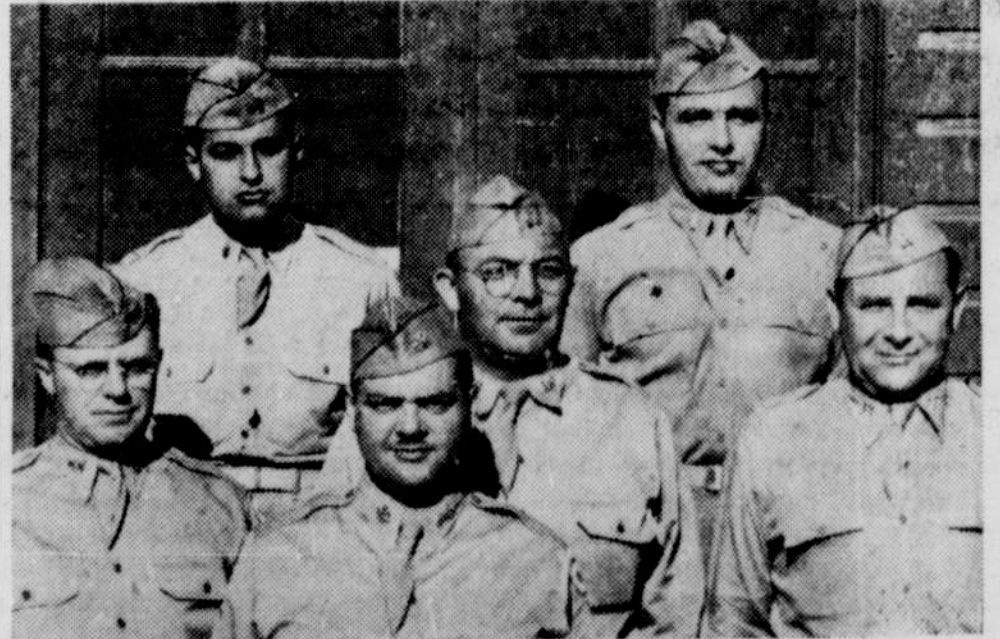

Last Sunday morning Club 2 was filled with enthusiastic EM who enjoyed an informal classical music concert from recordings available at the club.

A Pretty Sitting Pretty

OVERJOYED AT THE news of her husband's recent promotion to the rank of major, Mrs. Faye Woodford (center, of course) sits happily on the crossed arms of Lt. John Loffredo and Lt. George Kressaty, themselves but recently promoted, and hands each a 10-cent "see-gar," reversing the usual procedure.—Sentry photo.

Gentlemen, Where Are the Cigars?

RECENT PROMOTIONS ADVANCED these SCU officers to higher ranks. Names and new ranks are, left to right, front, Capt. Frank L. Moore, Maj. Thomas L. Chambers, Capt. George H. Godfrey. Rear, 1st Lt. George Kressaty, Capt. Carl Froerer, 1st Lt. John Loffredo.—Sentry photo.