

Bond Sales Zooming In 91st Artillery

Oregon State Coeds Help in Big Rally

The 91st Divarty enlisted the help of eight charming members of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority at OSC, who took over the Artillery Rec Hall Saturday and Sunday to boost bond sales $13,600.

The red-legs just couldn't say no when these lovely salesladies explained how easy it was to buy "the world's best investment."

At an all-artillery formation Saturday, Brigadier General Ralph Hospital, 91st Divarty commander, told his troops that war bonds were not only the safest investment today, but also one of the most profitable since the interest they bear compares favorably with most civilian financial institutions. The four artillery battalion commanders also addressed the formation.

"This War Bond rally climaxes the 91st Division Artillery's program participating in the 4th War Loan Drive," explained Lt. John Timmons, artillery war bond officer. "This brings the artillery's total sales to date $57,070."

One $10,000 Sale Puts 274th Over War Bond Quota

The $7,120 cash quota for bond sales in the 274th Infantry was oversubscribed on the first day of the 4th War Loan Drive with the purchase of a $10,000 War Savings Bond by Pvt. Arthur Grossman, of Reg. Hq. Co. in that organization.

Pvt. Grossman, a native of Portland, is one of the most ardent bond purchasers in the 70th Division. It was he who anonymously bought a $50,000 bond during the 3rd War Loan Drive several months ago. In civilian life Grossman was a diamond dealer and has consistently preached and practiced that bond savings are the best insurance for a system of free enterprise after the war.

A gigantic regimental rally is being planned by the 274th Special Service office in co-operation with Sgt. Raymond V. Beckman and Lt. George C. Bottoms, co-ordinators of the 4th War Loan Drive in that regiment.

Go to church on Sunday.

Eight More Reasons Why You Should Buy War Bonds

Trailblazers Aid in Portland Bond Rally

Appear on Program With Vice President

Trailblazers joined Tuesday with Henry L. Wallace, vice-president of the United States, in promoting the sale of War Bonds in Portland.

The vice-president, in the city on a nationwide tour of war plants and installations, spoke to huge crowds at the Victory Center at noon, sharing the platform with the Trailblazer Band.

In the adjacent area, detachments of men from other units of the 70th Division, under direction of Major Harvey Blythe, Special Service Officer, staged a day-long demonstration of infantry weapons.

The band furnished music for a radio broadcast of Vice-President Wallace's noon-hour speech, in which he stressed the need for larger bond sales to pay for more of such weapons as the Trailblazers were showing the crowd.

Charm Sells Another Bond

ARMED WITH PENCILS, Series E application blanks and plenty of charm, Joe Anne Hoare has just sold a bond to Lt. E. S. Watson, as Brigadier General Ralph Hospital, 91st Divarty commander, approves tactics used.

Aiming Straight for the Axis

CREDIT FOR THE cleverest bond-sales "thermometer" in the 4th War Loan Drive goes to 275th Inf. When the shell from the gun being fired by Cpl. Charles H. Bentley (lower right) reaches the top of the regimental quota it will strike the plane from which Hitler and Hirohito are leaning out. Sgt. Willis E. Dicee, left, Cpl. James Cloney look on.

91st Attacks on War Bond Front

Latest communique received from 91st Division Headquarters indicates savage attacks have been made on "Berlin" from five points in the 4th War Loan Drive. New gains shown on the campaign map in Division Hq. have been prominent in the 363rd Inf. and Divarty. The tally to date is $388,347, and the division objective is Berlin, $500,000.

The 361st Infantry has reached its objective by buying $112,640 worth of Bonds. The quota was $100,000, and they are now deep in the heart of "Berlin" with their demolition squads undermining the heart of the city. M Company is the advance party, with $9,850 in bonds, and is led by Pfc. Franklin S. Riley, who bought $6,000 worth personally.

FLASH! The 362nd Infantry is also in the city of "Berlin" via Waldenburg with a return of $100,075.

Attacking from a third front is 363rd Infantry with $69,250. T/Sgt. Gordon H. Dobbins of Sv. Co., using a few commando and hand to hand tactics, is leading the regiment with a $1,300 purchase.

The 91st Division Artillery drove the Nazis back in a speedy retreat last Saturday morning when eight lovely young bond saleswomen from OSC assisted their sales.

Special Troops are having a little trouble while storming the German block houses and the heavy gun emplacements near "Banders" in Denmark, but this week smashed that objective with a showing of $48,951, and now their reconnaissance units are approaching "Odense" and the $50,000 mark.

275th Bond Drive Going Full Blast

The War Bond Drive is going full blast at the 275th Regt. Under the direction of each company commander, every company is striving to do its bit to knock down Hirohito and Hitler off the thermometer in front of Regt. Hq.

Mr. Hawes, Warrant Officer of the regiment, reported that while exact figures cannot be given, he has learned that many of the men have written home to the "little woman" to okay further purchases.

70th MP Officers Set War Bond Pace

If any Trailblazer needs a good example for buying War Bonds in the 4th War Loan drive, the 70th MP platoon is hereby nominated.

The 70 men in the platoon have already purchased over $1,000 cash in bonds and Lt. C. H. Owens, Jr., who is in charge of the drive there, predicts that the total will reach well over $1,500. He is setting an example for the exemplary platoon with his $250 worth of bonds, and Lt. Walter C. Berger has salted away a $500 bond during the campaign.
