Solve seeks project leaders for Earth Day event

Solve is currently accepting applications for volunteers to lead Earth Day projects for the 26th annual Solve It event. Solve It events will take place across the state on Saturday, April 18, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Also as part of Solve It, teachers are encouraged to involve their students in service-learning activities any time between April 13 and 24.

The deadline for applications is Saturday, Jan. 31.

Project leaders receive assistance for Earth Day volunteer projects, including free project planning assistance and training, event flyers and pre-event publicity, online volunteer registration, and cleanup project supplies. Solve also has a limited number of grants of up to $100 for reimbursement of project expenses.

The Solve It program supports Oregonians who help take care of our parks, waterways and neighborhoods by picking up trash, pulling invasive weeds, planting trees and taking care of watersheds in other ways. Last year, Solve It helped 6,700 Oregonians volunteer at more than 180 sites across Oregon.

"The health and beauty of Oregon depends on the volunteer leaders who step up and commit to making a positive difference in the environment for Earth Day," said Quintin Bauer, Solve Statewide Team Leader. "Solve is ready to help individuals, community groups and government agencies organize successful volunteer events in their community to take care of the special natural areas, parks and neighborhoods they love."

Interested volunteer leaders can visit www.solveoregon.org to apply online.

"BOO-YAH," for the uninitiated, was the catchphrase of ESPN anchor Stuart Scott. He used it as a punctuation during highlight reels, typically basketball ones, and usually at the end of a tremendous slam or celestial three-pointer.

It became a catchphrase that was featured on video games ("NBA Jam" comes to mind) and an utterance that could be heard on any wiffleball diamond or basketball court across the country after school from that point on.

It also led to a lot of acrimony and apologetics. Comedians loved to zero in on Scott's selfproclaimed "hip-hop stylings," most notably the acerbic Daniel Tosh. "Easy, Stuart," he would say, pointing out that Scott had little "street cred" in that he had a degree from the University of North Carolina.

It also was common knowledge that early on in his career, the African-American Scott was told to "tone it down" more than once by the brass at ESPN for fear of alienating viewers, as if his brand of commentary was just too hardcore for the home audience to endure ... the audience that mirrored the same demographic that made Eminem, Dr. Dre, NWA and Snoop Dogg household names.

True, it sometimes felt forced, but it never felt unprofessional. For the better part of a decade — and I do mean better part — Scott and his battery mate Rich Eisen held down the early-morning "SportsCenter" slot, and it was just about perfect. The two had a comedic timing that rivaled Abbott and Costello, a presence behind the desk that exceeded McNeil and Lehrer. Eisen, now the lead anchor for the NFL Network, realized it, too.

"Who would have thought that the perfect guy for me, a Jewish kid from Staten Island, would be an African-American guy with North Carolina roots? Sometimes neither one of us knew whom the other was talking about, but it worked. It was always a trip doing a 'SportsCenter' with Stuart.'

In 2007, Scott was diagnosed with cancer, and it was a battle he lost Jan. 4 at the age of 49. He leaves behind two teenage daughters, legions of fans — including those who are only now, begrudgingly and belatedly, giving him the respect he deserves, myself included — and a congregation of colleagues that Scott addressed best in what became his own eulogy upon accepting the Jimmy V Award in 2014. "You beat cancer by how you live." Mr. Scott, the congregation
