

#29. THE THIRD ROCK: Alice Lundmark has a collection of 3-D art; feather fans; fossil, and feather jewelry; geodes and mineral specimens; book-ends, coasters and jewelry made from stones. Romance the stone at The Third Rock booth.

#30. DJ'S JEWELRY: Donna Kline hand strings pearls, shells and glass beads to create exquisite necklaces, earrings and bracelets. You will find a lovely jeweled gift at DJ's jewelry booth.

#31. SWEATER HEADS: With the winter months on us, Leslie McCray has a vast assortment of items that will warm your body and make you feel stylish. The inventory includes scarves, fingerless gloves, fun hats and hair ornaments.

#32. SHARRAY ORIGINALS: Let Ray's crystal prisms shine their rainbow of light in your window. Beaded glass original jewelry is also for sale in this bright shining booth.

#33. ANNIE FISCHER SHUTTLECREEK WEAVING: Looms often stand dusty in museums. Annie Fischer of Shuttle Creek is a live interactive weaver who can answer questions and explain how cloth is made while demonstrating at her loom. There is nothing like watching the harnesses rise and fall while the shuttle slips in between the threads. Right before your eyes the yarn is turned to fabric. The beautiful colors combine to produce interesting, functional garments.

For the gourmet, there's jams, roasted nuts and a new addition, Atlas Hard Cider. Soaps and creams in lavender and other flavors will tempt the senses.

Keep an eye out for empty bowls for Florence Food Share and a fun booth for the Florence Humane Society, and hand woven clothing. CDs and gift items from Winter Folk Festival performers will be on sale too, along with this year's WFF signature clothing.
