Making Family Life More Fun

Five Essential Vacation Rental Planning Tips

(NAPSA)-There are two good reasons why now is the ideal time to start planning your family vacation. One is to avoid being among the 40 percent of Americans the U.S. Travel Industry estimates do not use all their earned vacation days. The other is because research indicates the simple act of planning a vacation results in a large boost in happiness that can last for up to eight weeks.

Here's another tip: If you are traveling as a family or group, this year consider staying in a vacation rental. Not only does renting a whole house offer twice the space at half the cost of a hotel room, they also come with a host of budget-friendly amenities.

Kitchens make it easy to prepare food using local ingredients rather than eating out at pricey restaurants every meal, while access to washing machines allow travelers to pack less and avoid paying hefty bag-check fees. Many feature added perks, including private pools, hot tubs and game rooms for everyone to join together and create special memories throughout their stay. That's likely why 85 percent of those who stay in a vacation rental plan to do it again on their next family trip or group getaway.

"Vacation rentals give travelers a respite from their hectic lives so they can focus on spending time with their loved ones, all gathered together under the same roof," said Rene Syler, who regularly helps travelers find the perfect getaway as host of "Sweet Retreats" on the FYI television network. "Booking a vacation rental is easier than it seems. You just need to know where to start and the right questions to ask before sealing the deal."

Ready to book your own vacation rental? Follow Rene's five essential tips and get ready to pack your bags:

1. Use Sites with the Most Inventory. The more homes to choose from the better your chances will be of finding a property that meets your specific budget and needs, including size, proximity to an attraction, or pet-friendly requirements. Travelers should check out HomeAway.com as it is the world's leading vacation rental marketplace with listings in 190 countries.
2. Read Reviews and Talk

Plan and book your vacation now so your family can look forward to it in the weeks ahead.

with Homeowners. Reviews are a great way to get a better idea of the property and can offer additional insights from other travelers. Once you have selected a home, pick up the phone and call the homeowner or property manager to ask about anything important to you, like if there is a childproof gate around the pool or if it is wheelchair accessible.

3. Secure a Rental Agreement. Ask for all the details in advance via a rental agreement, such as check-in/check-out times and house rules, to avoid any last-minute surprises. Since rentals are generally reserved further in advance than a hotel room, be sure to note important items such as the refund date.

4. Secure Your Trip. Vacation rentals are a high-ticket item, so it is important to take steps to safeguard your transaction. Always call ahead to confirm the details of your reservation before making a purchase, and only pay via secure services like PayPal or a credit card. Additional insurance can be purchased to protect travelers from a variety of situations, ranging from property damage to cancellation protection.

5. Go Mobile. From purchasing event tickets to hiring babysitters and personal chefs, use apps to turn your smartphone into a digital concierge. On HomeAway's app, travelers can request car rides from Uber, order groceries through Instacart for delivery to their rental, and access Gogobot to help plan local activities and find recommended restaurants.

Seven Questions To Ask Yourself Before Starting A Business

(NAPSA)-People start businesses every day. Life is full of opportunities, and pursuing the American Dream of business ownership is one of them. But ask yourself-do you personally have what it takes to run a business?

"When you start a business, your head, heart and gut need to be in it," said Diane Emo, author and former small-business owner, now with Coverall North America, Inc. "I believe a lot of people have what it takes but something holds them back."

Despite the fear factor, people are doing it. According to the May 2014 Wells Fargo/Gallup Small Business Index, 84 percent of small-business owners said they would do it over again. Key reasons included independence, pride and flexibility. Key challenges were finding customers, managing cash flow, and financing.

Do you have what it takes to start a business? Ask yourself seven serious questions.

1. Are my dreams bigger than my fears?
Many people have ideas that could be great but they fail to take action. Entrepreneurs arise when they fix the gap between a problem and a solution-even if the rest of us could not see the need...Facebook, Google and Spanx. Taking no action is safe and familiar. Taking action and starting a business is risky and unknown. Business owners make things happen. "Let your dreams be bigger than your fears, and your actions louder than your words."
2. Am I a perfectionist?
When you're running a business, perfect rarely happens. You will have to take actions and make decisions without knowing all the facts-always moving forward and being smart. No one has a crystal ball. Overanalyzing can result in perpetual dreaming.
3. Do I expect pay for every hour worked?
Employees look at money as pay for hours worked. Business owners view money as profit. They see their business as an investment, not a job. For example, if an employee makes $20 an hour and works eight hours, that's $160, right? But what if you own a restaurant? Your profit depends on how many people you served, what they ordered, labor, advertising, overhead. Business owners look at eight hours as opportunity to create profit.

4. Do I need steady cash flow?

While many of us like to believe we are risk takers, be honest with yourself about your tolerance for erratic income. When cash flow is steady, you can count on revenue coming in and expenses paid out. But when your business has negative cash flow, the financial and emotional stress can shut you down. Run through "what if" scenarios and create a realistic business plan that matches your skill set, risk profile and personal life. What if your cash doesn't cover your expenses? What if you aren't able to find customers as quickly as you thought? What if customers don't pay on time? Plan your safety net now.

5. Can I sell?

Do you like to sell? A lot of people say no. They may have a negative perception of people who sell for a living, or are afraid of rejection. When you're proud of your business, you will want to tell everyone about it. Selling is about building relationships and delivering what you promise. If you don't sell, you don't grow.

6. Do I take criticism personally?

It's human nature to protect our ego. So when your customer calls to complain, there are things you might want to say (use your imagination), but only if you plan to lose a customer. If criticism kills you emotionally, then you'll need to think seriously about how you will react to customers. Pointing fingers at others and playing the blame game won't work. You know what they say about pointing a finger at someone else? There are three fingers pointing right back at you. As a business owner, change your mind-set from "He's wrong and I don't need to take this from him" to "This is a business problem that I need to solve." It's not personal, it's business.

7. Am I willing to give up my free time?

When you're the boss you have a lot of flexibility, but the responsibilities and financial importance of success are greater. As a business owner you will need to make sacrifices and work hard to maintain personal relationships, a healthy lifestyle and a reasonable balance between work demands and real life. Become an expert at quick prioritization, decision making and delegation. Always focus on what's most important.
