performances a week.

The camp produced such literary works as “War Elegies” and “Waldport Poems” by Everson and “Horned Moon” by Glen Coffield.

After the war, camp members went on to influence other cultural currents which eventually led to the radical peace movements of the ‘60s.

McQuiddy has won awards for his feature writing, is an honorary director of the Oregon Cultural Heritage Commission, and currently teaches writing at Lane Community College in Eugene.

The presentation is free, but a day-use or Northwest Forest pass is required in the Cape Perpetua Scenic Area.

Saved at sea

Members of U.S. Coast Guard Siuslaw River Station assist the crew of the Ester Friday morning after the smaller ship had mechanical difficulties between Tillamook and Florence. The Ester was on its way to the Port of Siuslaw, where it has permission to moor for a month. Now, repairs will have to be made before the Ester is sea-worthy again.

one of the great things about baseball!

Yes, when Bob Costas says a player is so old they use “Absorbine Sr.,” the joke is on him because nobody outside of the Korean War generation knows what Absorbine Jr. is in the first place. It’s great because Costas is like that uncle at the holiday table who always tells the same story.

“I don’t like inter-league play!”

We know, Uncle Bob, we know ... but everybody should get to see the Yankees at least once a decade.

Baseball, unlike many sports, matters all the way through the game. Watching a starter at the top of his powers is like watching a matador. He strides confidently out to the mound, he mesmerizes the charging batters and asserts his will on the outcome. Never mind that we’ve never seen an actual matador or understand the allure of the bullfight. We don’t know what’s in the hot dogs, either. It doesn’t matter.

Don’t overthink it.

Let the ballpark metaphors wash over you like waves. Ride it out for all nine innings. Revel in the clutch hit, in the adept way the second basemen turns two, at how the closer didn’t even blink when the bases were loaded before striking out the side. Every game tells a different story.

This season, go to a game. Go to a game with no agenda other than being there to watch the game.

Don’t complain about the prices; save up.

Bring your kid. Tell them stories about the baseball players you watched growing up, and while you’re at the game, just watch the game.

Relax, will ya?

The next morning, get a newspaper and show your kid the box score. Cut it out, paperclip it to the game program and tell him to keep it in a box. Decades later, it will be found.

You thought the game was too long? The game isn’t too long ... it simply lasts forever.

Meet TYLER

Greetings to You! I am Tyler, or as some of the staff calls me; MyTy or TyeDye! I am a dog who does best with a set schedule and set boundaries with a lot of ball throwing added in too! I love to go on walks and have pretty good manners on a leash. Kids are very fun playmates and I would do great with older children. I do best when I have strong leadership, I need to be dog and you the boss!

If you would like to meet Tyler or any of his friends, please visit us at:
