Dunes City close to septic ordinance

BY JACK DAVIS
Siuslaw News

During the March 12 meeting, Dunes City Planning Commission Chairman Paul Gargis urged the Dunes City council to expedite the signing and implementation of the city's revised septic ordinance as soon as possible.

"It's like we have come to a dead stop," Gargis said. "Every week the planning commission has to be here. I'd like to know where the ordinance is at today? What still needs to be accomplished?"

"There is a laundry list of 20 to 30 things that still have to be done," City Administrator Fred Hilden said. "We are working through it as quickly as we can."

Hilden also said city staff would try and have that information to Gargis in time for the next planning commission meeting.

Mayor Rebecca Ruede

told Gargis that the council was consulting with city attorneys to make sure there would be no problems with the language of the revised ordinance.

"I can assure you we are doing it as fast as we possibly can. As we get farther along, the dates and time lines will become more evident to you and everyone," Ruede said. "We set a deadline of June 30, 2016, as a goal to be completed. That's about all the specifics I can give you right now."

Councilor Maurice Sanders reported that the road commission is short of volunteers.

He said the commission met, but did not have a quorum.

He voiced concern that the commission might be losing one or two more members and that Dunes City might not have a road commission in the near future.

He also told the council that the road commission would likely be submitting requests for approximately $100,000 in structural repairs.

He warned of the beginning of a downward spiraling structural deficit.

"The day is coming, and it is coming sooner than you think, that this city will have to decide whether it wants to have a tax base to operate government services at a city level or not. If it doesn't, it will not be able to function with the revenue it has."

"This council needs to be looking at the future, not just next year, but the next three to five years," Sanders said.

In other business, Hilden said the Dunes City website had been hacked, most likely by overseas hackers, in order to spam outbound emails. He said the city has switched to a new, more secure hosting service that "ended up saving the city about $300 to $400 per year."
