Public input sought on wolf delisting proposal

The ODFW's informational briefing and rulemaking for the proposal of removing gray wolves from the state Endangered Species list will take place in Florence Oct. 9. Commissioners want to provide adequate time for public testimony and discussion during the meetings. Public testimony will be taken at the meeting but can also be emailed to odfw.comments@state.or.us. Make sure to include "Comments on Wolf Delisting Proposal" in the subject line of emails.

The Oct. 9 meeting will be held at Driftwood Shores Resort and Conference Center, 88416 First Ave., beginning at 8 a.m.

Coach from 1B

when he retired as the school's longest-tenured coach, holding school records for coaching victories (223) and winning percentage (.514).

"I had a chance to see a Siuslaw game last season," Biggs said. "They had some good young talent.

"I don't know enough about the level of competition, but from the talent I saw, I'm optimistic we'll do OK."

Biggs and his wife, Marisa Hawk, bought their house in Florence in 2012, and moved in fulltime in 2014.

"He retired to Oregon to catch fish, big fish," Graybill wrote in his Monday news release.

"I'm still looking to catch some big fish," Biggs said during a phone interview, laughing.

Biggs, from Pleasanton, Calif., in the San Francisco bay area, began his career at James Logan High School in Union City, leading the Colts to five league titles and three consecutive trips to the Northern California championships.

Biggs went on to coach Ohione College in Fremont, Calif., for two years before taking over as head coach at Cal State East Bay.

"(Cal State East Bay) was a great place to work, a wonderful place," Biggs said. "I enjoyed it a lot."

He led the Pioneers to two Cal Pac Conference titles and five trips to the NAIA Division II national championships. In 2009, Cal State East Bay rejoined the NCAA Division II as a member of the California Collegiate Association.

Biggs and his wife have two grown children who still live in the Bay Area.

Biggs replaces Jack Butler, who resigned after three seasons with the Vikings. Butler is an assistant coach with the Siuslaw cross country team, and the recent past president of the Siuslaw Athletic Booster Club.

First day of practice for Biggs and the Vikings is Nov. 16.

Retired sportswriter Stan Pusieski writes exclusively for the Siuslaw News and his website, ExplodingWhaleSports.com.
