Historic rock wall restoration begins on Hwy 101

The rebuilding of a historic rock wall along Highway 101, just north of Sea Lion Caves, at milepost 179, will begin next week, creating a construction zone that will require a single lane closure and flagging 24 hours per day until the project is completed in April 2016. Located approximately nine miles north of Florence, the original wall was constructed in 1931. Over time, the wall has lost its integrity in several places. This project will increase the height and restore the integrity and the aesthetic appearance of a portion of the historic rock retaining wall along the ocean side of the highway. This section of Highway 101 is a designated scenic highway in Oregon. The Sea Lion Point Rock Wall is one of four designated rockwork sites on Highway 101, and is the second longest of these types of features. It is the only designated rockwork feature in Lane County. The Sea Lion Point Rock Wall is a good example of a rock feature constructed at the time. The project will also replace the bridge rail on a half-viaduct near Cape Perpetua, at milepost 166. H.P. Civil Inc., of Stayton

Oregon was awarded the low-bid contract of $2.6 million. The Rock Wall project will be one of several October work zones between Florence and Yachats. During the month of October, travelers between Florence and Yachats should plan additional time for the trip between the two cities. Heading north from Florence, travelers will encounter: • Several work zones associated with a two-year paving and curve widening project taking place between mileposts 179 and 184. Crews on that project will be working days, nights and weekends to meet a Saturday, Oct. 31, contract deadline. • The 24-hour-per-day single lane closure at the Sea Lion Point Rock Wall at milepost 178. • Intermittent single lane closures and flagging at a slide mitigation project at milepost 177. Crews say this project will be completed by mid-October. While most of the work zones are short in length, resulting in short travel delays, the cumulative effect of the work zones may create a total delay of a half-hour or more. Travelers are advised to add extra time to their travel schedules.

Environmental film to be screened in Yachats Oct. 15

YACHATS — Fawn Custer, a CoastWatch Volunteer Coordinator and a Marine Environmental Educator, will give a presentation for the Yachats Academy of Arts and Sciences on Thursday, Oct. 15, at 6:30 p.m. at the Yachats Commons. The film, “It’s Everybody’s Ocean,” will also be viewed at this presentation. Custer has worked in both formal and informal settings for 25 years. She earned degrees as a marine lab technician, in science education and in biological sciences and has a Master’s of Science (MS) degree in environmental education and a MS in integrated science, with post graduate courses in learning behavior and free choice learning. As a member of the Northwest Aquatic and Marine

Educators, Oregon Science Teachers Association and as an instructor at the Hatfield Marine Science Center, she frequently presented workshops and curriculum for both formal and informal educators. Custer’s passion for the Oregon Coast has been enhanced by the opportunity of being the CoastWatch Volunteer Coordinator, working with more than 1,300 dedicated volunteers along the Oregon Coast. Citizen science programs in which CoastWatchers are currently involved include: marine debris surveys, protocols for sea star recruitment and participation in the Marine Mammal Stranding reports. They report to Oregon State University regarding beached marine animals. There is no admission for the presentation, although a $5 donation will help defray publicity expenses. For more information, go to www.YachatsAcademy.org, www.GoYachats.com/events or call 541-961-6695.
