OBITUARIES

RUSSELL-Karen Russell, 53, of Florence, passed away Jan., 18, 2016, at home surrounded by her family.

> She died of a brain tumor that courashe geously fought for five years.

Karen Russell

Karen was born April 28, 1962, to Byron and Reta Pengra. She was the youngest of their five children.

Born and raised in Florence, she attended school and graduated from Siuslaw High School in 1980.

After high school, she attended Oregon Institute of Technology in Klamath Falls, where she pursued a diploma in medical sciences.

She returned to Portland, Ore., after college and worked in the dental field. She also worked in Eugene. Eighteen years after leaving Florence, Karen and her family moved back to Florence to be closer to friends and family.

Throughout her life, she worked in the care and service to others. She worked in the dental field, medical field, as a Certified Nursing Assistant and as a teaching assistant in the Siuslaw School District.

Karen was kind and loved fiercely and deeply. She was quick-witted, funny and knew how to have a good time.

Karen's laugh was contagious and she laughed easily.

She was a great cook and an avid sports fan. Her devotion to the Oregon Ducks and the Denver Broncos was intense.

She had a life-size standup poster board of John Elway in her entryway at one time.

DI GIORGIO—John Di Giorgio, 91, formerly of

John Di Giorgio

Florence, died Jan. 22, 2016. He was born Jan. 14, 1925, in the family home in Somerville, Mass., the son of Joseph Anthony Di Giorgio and Josephine (Brescia) Di

Giorgio of Boston. A 1943 graduate of Somerville High School in Boston, John served 24 months

He served across France and Germany and was in Czechoslovakia at war's end.

Returning to the U.S., his ship was nearly sunk in a North Atlantic hurricane Christmas, 1945. His crippled ship limped into the Azores, and eventually the men were transferred to the aircraft carrier Enterprise for the voyage to New York City.

The entire return trip, scheduled to take eight days, lasted exactly one month.

One of John's strongest memories of World War II was of war-weary vets on the ship crying, feeling certain they would not survive the storm.

This likely explains John's lifelong refusal to take a pleasure cruise!

Discharged January 1946, by March he began 16 years of studies in biochemistry that included a bachelor of science in chemistry, with minors in math and physics, from Northeastern University; masters and doctorates in Biochemistry from University of Buffalo and post-doctoral work in clinical chemistry at the University of Washington.

He also had research positions at Washington State College (now university), Boston University School of Medicine and two stints at the Department of Nutrition, Harvard School of Public Health.

Entering the industry in 1966, John spent 15 years with Dow Chemical Health Sciences, developing blood chemistry tests and reagent sets, helping to set up the Diagnostic Products group at Dow Lepetit in Milan, Italy, and researching hemodialysis therapy for patients with kidney failure.

He later performed research at two venture capital-funded

He and Barbara were active volunteers for the Florence Events Center and treasured the dear friendships they developed through the Presbyterian Church of the Siuslaw and Florence Rotary Club.

Declining health forced a move back to California in June 2015, where he passed away at home with Barbara and his sons at his side.

He is the beloved husband of 58 years to Barbara Ann Di Giorgio; father of Marlene (d.1972), Carl of Lafayette, Calif., and Brian of Oakland, Calif.; father-in-law to Mary Di Giorgio and Elizabeth Southwick Adam; "Papa" to grandsons Evan and Connor Di Giorgio; beloved uncle of Joanne Bryanos and Janet Taylor, both of Nahant, Mass.; and loved by the Di Giorgio families throughout Boston area.

A memorial service is scheduled for 3 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 6, at Grace Presbyterian Church, Walnut Creek, Calif.
