C James Nursery

C James Nursery specializes in Down Under Pots, an innovative way to display the beauty of your favorite plants. Designed to hang, the Down Under Pot allows your plants to grow from the bottom of the pot.

One of the design features of the Down Under Pot is an internal reservoir, at the base of the pot. The reservoir catches water where the root system is developing, thus feeding the plant and providing the root system with a wall upon which to anchor. Its a simple process to plant.

Start the normal way, with the pot full of "soil" and the plant at the top. Allow the pot to remain in this "normal" position until you are satisfied that the plant is established. Then invert the pot and hang it using the wire, which is already fitted to the pot for the purpose. The plant has established its root system and is now growing in the potting mix in the Down Under Pot. It is the design of the pot and the established root system of the plant that keep both the plant and the potting mix from falling out.

When the pot is in the initial position, sit it in a shallow container to keep the potting mix moist while the plant establishes. Once the pot has been inverted and is hanging in position, water and fertilize through the top of the pot.

We have four sizes and 20 colors of Down Under Pots in addition to eight different colors of Martha Washington geraniums, herbs, succulent and other plants to be potted for a small fee.

If you have a Down Under Pot, clean it out, bring your coconut fiber and we'll repot it for you. Stop by our booth to learn more.
