Anecdotes and maxims are rich treasures to the man of the world, for he knows how to introduce the former at fit place in conversation.
—Johann Wolfgang von Goethe

There are many who talk on from ignorance rather than from knowledge, and who find the former an inexhaustible fund of conversation.
—William Hazlitt

Wit is the salt of conversation, not the food.
—William Hazlitt

Clever people are always the best conversations lexicon.
—Johann Wolfgang von Goethe

In conversation, humor is worth more than wit and easiness more than knowledge.
—George Herbert

Saying what we think gives a wider range of conversation than saying what we know.
