AN EVENING OF SIUSLAW LEGENDS

BY NED HICKSON
Siuslaw News

Though it was a new venue for the sixth annual Siuslaw Hall of Fame induction ceremony on Saturday, with Viking fans, inductees, family and friends gathering at Three Rivers Casino Resort, the evening was full of blasts from Siuslaw legendary athletic past.

“It was another amazing celebration of the history of Siuslaw athletics,” said Chris Johnson, who serves as the Hall of Fame chairman as well as the newly appointed athletic director at Siuslaw. “We have a lot of athletic tradition at Siuslaw, and it’s a night to acknowledge and celebrate it.”

It was the second-largest group of inductees since the Hall of Fame’s debut in 2011, when 13 individuals and one team were recognized, spanning more than 40 years of athletics history and achievement.

On Saturday, eight individuals and two teams were welcomed into the hallowed hall.

Harold McClellan, a 1958 graduate, was the first to take the stage after being introduced by his son and fellow Hall-of-Famer Jef McClellan, who was inducted in 2012.

“I can’t express what it means to stand here and introduce my father tonight,” McClellan said as his father made his way to the podium. “It’s a very special night for all of us.”

New head volleyball coach Jon Hornung tends to smile a lot. Not just because he loves the sport. Or because he’s excited about taking over a program he knows has all the ingredients to reach the next level.

“It’s just a great group I’m really enjoying coaching,” Hornung says. “I’ve got players who want to stay after practice to work on ways to improve their serves or kill shots. Not for themselves but for the team.

“You have to love that as a coach.”

His players are sharing the love.

“It’s a good fit and we’re all on the same page,” says Jordan Long, a sophomore who will once again be seeing some solid varsity minutes this season. “He makes it fun, and we’re getting in lots of conditioning while we’re doing it.”

Hornung played volleyball throughout his school years, including at state in high school, the junior Olympics and at the intramural level in college while at Minnesota-Duluth pursuing his interests in education and science. As a graduate student at Oregon State University, Hornung switched gears from a doctorate in oceanology to master’s degrees in education and oceanology before being hired at Siuslaw High School four years ago.

He kept his love for volleyball burning by volunteering as a line coach during home matches. It also kept him plugged into the players and the
