SOS receives $50,628 grant

Siuslaw Outreach Services (SOS) will receive $50,628 over the next three years as part of a Department of Justice Rural Grant. The grant was awarded to Kidsfirst in Eugene, a nonprofit organization which serves children who are victims of child abuse and sexual assault.

Kidsfirst started in 1994 in partnership with the Lane County District Attorney's office. Kidsfirst included SOS in its grant application last year, using a Memorandum of Understanding, so that there could be local advocacy in west Lane County for children it serves in Eugene.

Two SOS advocates have already completed a 40-hour training course directed at these kinds of services. The grant covers a one-quarter full-time equivalency advocate position, related personnel expenses, travel, training and communication.

SOS has received similar ongoing grants in the last year and a half through partnerships with Womenspace and Sexual Assault Support Services (SASS), both also in Eugene. These partnerships allow for local advocacy and quicker response times, and save on expensive travel.

"We are very pleased to be working closely with all three of these organizations," said SOS Executive Director David Wiegan. "We have been participating in Child Abuse Multi-Disciplinary Intervention meetings and staff trainings at Kidsfirst for several years. They do an amazing job with extremely difficult situations."

For more information about SOS, visit florescesos.org, call the business office at 541-997-2816 or stop by 1576 W. 12th St. For emergencies, call the Crisis Line at 541-997-4444.

National Guard to hold convoy at FEC Sunday

An Oregon National Guard Convoy will be at the Florence Events Center on Sunday, Oct. 23, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. The National Guard personnel and equipment will be set up in the parking lot of the Florence Events Center 715 Quince St.

The Convoy's objective is to establish rapport and build a relationship between the local community and the Oregon National Guard. The public is encouraged to attend this event to speak with representatives from the Oregon National Guard, as well as local emergency response representatives.

While traveling to the coast, the Oregon National Guard convoy participants will observe potential route obstructions that could result from a Cascadia earthquake.

Leadership of the Oregon National Guard seeks to demonstrate to the local community that they understand the challenges that coastal residents will face in the event of a major Cascadia earthquake and tsunami.

Captain Matt Owen with the Oregon National Guard will give a brief talk every half hour or so about the steps people can do now to get better prepared.

Personnel will speak to the attendees about preparedness, the resources that the National Guard can bring to a community, and how individuals should prepare for a disaster.

The event will also provide the Oregon National Guard with an opportunity to perform a drill that involves setting up and feeding a large number of people in a short period of time.

They will be bringing their containerized kitchen and feeding everyone who attends a hamburger or hot dog lunch.

Specialized equipment used by the Oregon National Guard, as well as local emergency response agencies, will be on display for public viewing.

City Public Information Officer Megan Messmer said, "We will also have local responders there to talk with citizens about how they should prepare at home."
