Numbness? Cramping and weakness in your legs could be a blocked artery.

If you suffer from cramping, fatigue or numbness in your legs, or skin discoloration and pain in your feet, this could indicate blocked blood flow to your legs, also known as peripheral artery disease (PAD). It may also be a sign of blocked arteries elsewhere in your body, including your heart. If you have any of these symptoms, make an appointment with your primary care physician immediately or call Summit Surgical Specialists. Treatments include medical or non-interventional, minimally invasive and open surgical procedures. Talk to your primary care physician today about your symptoms or call us at 541-988-6330.

Patient results may vary. Consult your physician about the benefits and risks of any surgical procedure or treatment.
