House concert series to kick off with Lovejoy

Local singer, keyboardist and bassist Jeff Lovejoy will be kicking off the new season of Kathy Parsons' house concert series Wednesday, March 1, at 7 p.m.

Lovejoy has played in bands, duos and trios for more than 45 years in Massachusetts, New York, Maine and Colorado.

He's also done solo performances over the years, ranging from dance music in clubs to lighter fare for dinner music. He generally plays a mix of songs from the 1960s to 1980s, mostly laid-back tunes from

The Eagles, Eric Clapton, The Byrds and Bob Dylan. He might throw in a little New Age music or a few originals as well.

Lovejoy will also be performing at the Florence Unitarian Universalist Fellowship (FUUF) in mid-March.

"Most of the tunes I do are sung and I love it when folks sing along," said Lovejoy. "In the end I believe music is meant to communicate between hearts as much as minds."

"There is way too much rancor and ugliness in the world — at least that we hear about on a regular basis — so if I can bring people to a deeper, happier place for a bit, that's all I would ever ask for."

There is a suggested donation of $15 at the door.

The address of the house concert in Sandpines West, and directions, will be furnished when reservations are made.

Make reservations by calling Kathy Parsons at 541-999-9720 or email kathyipiano@gmail.com.
