OBITUARIES

BARRETT—Julie Barrett, who was a long-time resident of Florence, passed away unexpectedly Feb. 23, from complications of surgery.
 Julie was diagnosed with throat cancer in 2014.
 She had surgery to remove the cancer the end of January. She fought hard and was in remission when she passed away.
 She is survived by her mother; five older siblings; her partner of more than 10 years;

three children: Jennifer Barrett-Neet, Stefanie Barrett-Dean and Kevin Hoyt.
 She most enjoyed spending the last five years in the company of her five grandchildren, whom she shares with her ex-husband, Doug Barrett.
 She was taken way to soon and will be forever missed.
 A service will be held for her Friday, March 24, at the meeting Yurt at West Woahink State Park, at 2 p.m.

Correction

In the page six photo of the Saturday, March 18, issue of Siuslaw News, "Reno," a Miniature American Shepherd was mistakenly referred to as "her." Reno is a male and was awarded a "Select" ribbon at this year's Westminster Dog Show in New York City.
 Siuslaw News regrets the error.

Department of Revenue warns of identity theft

Personal income tax returns are due April 18, but fraudsters could be trying to use your identity to commit tax fraud right now.
 Tax agencies nationwide are reminding taxpayers to protect their tax information throughout the year, but to be especially careful this time of year, when tax documents might be more accessible to criminals.
 "Fraudsters are always looking for more information to use in submitting bogus refund claims," said Ken Ross, the head of the Oregon Department of Revenue's anti-fraud efforts. "Protecting taxpayers from identity theft goes hand-in-hand with protecting the state from tax fraud." Ross said that fraudsters won't hesitate to grab data off of an unsecured Wi-Fi network or steal the W-2 from your purse in your car, if the opportunity arises. Taxpayers keeping their own tax information secure is an important part of combating fraudsters. What do I need to know as a taxpayer?

 Protect your information help keep sensitive information out of the wrong hands by doing the following:
 • Beware of phishing scams, where fraudsters will try to get you to share personal information by email or over the phone by pretending they already know it. Calls that ask you to "confirm" your Social Security number are a common example.

 • Be cautious when using Wi-Fi. Unsecured Wi-Fi networks are a popular target for hackers, especially as more taxpayers connect their mobile devices to them.
 • Change passwords frequently. Experts recommend changing passwords every 60-90 days and not using the same password in multiple places.
 • Keep tax documents physically secure and inaccessible to criminals. If your tax documents aren't in your presence, keep them locked up.
 • Hang up on suspicious phone calls. No matter how urgent someone makes a situation sound, you can always hang up, call the Department of Revenue at their published phone number 503-378-4988 or 1-800-356-4222, and know that you're dealing with an actual employee.

 • Verify your identity. Revenue staff follow up on suspicious tax returns. When you file your return, they'll send you a letter if they're not sure it's legitimate.
 If you get an identity verification letter, respond as soon as you can. You can verify your identity by mail or by taking an online identity verification quiz.
 Report identity theft if you think or know your identity was stolen at www.oregon.gov/dor, or call 503-947-2000.

Septic repair loans could be offered through DEQ

SALEM — The Oregon Senate has passed a bill allowing residents and small businesses with failing septic systems to use an existing low-interest loan program to assess and potentially hook up with existing community septic systems.
 Senate Bill 812, which was passed on a 27-0 vote on the Senate floor Monday, specifies that septic system loan funds can be used to conduct a regional evaluation of community on-site septic systems to determine if repair or replacement is necessary.
 It also says that if a community septic system is available that the loan funds must be used to connect to the existing septic. The home or business then would be disconnected from the onsite system that had been failing.

 "This bill allows residents or businesses that have failing septic systems to connect to community systems, when one exists and it's possible for them to do that," said Sen. Arnie Roblan (D-Coos Bay), who carried the bill. "This makes it easier and cheaper for people to hook up to existing systems that work, when it's possible, without having to completely rebuild their system."
 This bill adds clarity to specific grant agreement components for the low-interest loan program administered by the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality and created by Senate Bill 1563 in the 2016 Legislative Session.
 That bill appropriated

$250,000 to DEQ to administer the low-interest loan program. Loan funds can be used to replace, upgrade and evaluate residential and small business on-site septic systems that are failing. When there is an existing sewer system, funds can be used to hook up to that, but the clarification in SB 812 was necessary to include community septic systems as a qualifying alternative.
 More than 30 percent of Oregonians rely on septic systems to treat wastewater from their homes and businesses.
 Failing and malfunctioning systems can pollute Oregon's land and waterways with raw sewage, creating significant public health hazards.
 "It's good for the environment and water quality and public health," Roblan said. "It benefits rural Oregon tremendously."

 SB 812 now goes to the House of Representatives for consideration.
