America's Heroes

Little-Known Cold War Hero And Little-Known Cold War Facts

(NAPSA) - Attorney James B. Donovan-an American hero from U.S. history's Cold War era under Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy-was little known to most until the recent release of Steven Spielberg's Academy Award(r)-nominated motion picture "Bridge of Spies." A man of many achievements, Donovan is the center of the film, which depicts him defending Soviet spy Rudolf Abel and then negotiating the 1962 exchange of Abel for the Russian-captured American U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers. The film is available in various High-Definition formats from Walt Disney Studios.

Attorney James B. Donovan, a little-known American hero...

...was played by Tom Hanks in the movie "Bridge of Spies."

Donovan (played by Tom Hanks) chose to defend Abel on the grounds that he, Donovan, would be upholding the basic principles of justice and human rights. But the lawyer feared for his life during a time when Cold War paranoia was at its height. High stakes and suspense power the film's story inspired by true events-one that brings Donovan's personal journey to life and captures the essence of a man who risked everything for his country.

It is worth noting that Donovan's accomplishments didn't end with this case. He later successfully negotiated the return of 1,113 prisoners from the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba. Two truly heroic accomplishments by a man who never considered himself a hero.

The Abel story was uncovered by "Bridge of Spies" screenwriter Matt Charman, who came upon a footnote in a JFK biography that referenced the Abel/Powers swap. Spielberg was immediately taken with Donovan's tale as the director had strong childhood memories of stories from his father, who'd been to Russia and had seen a display of the U-2 remains.

The Cold War era was a frightening time for the world. It lasted from the end of World War II until the fall of the Soviet Union in 1991.

Many older people remember the "duck & cover" under-the-desk drills American schools ran in case of Soviet attack, plus the Cuban Missile Crisis, which brought the U.S. to the brink of nuclear war with Russia over the establishment of missile sites in Cuba.

Just as Donovan was a little-known hero of the Cold War, there are a number of facts that are little known about that important time in history. Here's a look at 10 of them.

- The term "Cold War" was first used by George Orwell, author of "Animal Farm," the book satirizing Stalinism.
- Ten different U.S. presidents held office during the Cold War (Roosevelt, Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, Ford, Carter, Reagan, Bush).
- The entrance of a missile-launch center in South Dakota was protected by an armed door with the Domino's Pizza logo on it. It read "worldwide delivery in 30 minutes or less, or your next one is free."
- When a CIA consultant spotted soccer fields along the coast of Cuba in September 1962, he became concerned because, as he put it, "Cubans play baseball; Russians play soccer." This led Kennedy to seek hard evidence and subsequent aerial photographs convinced the president that Russia was indeed putting missiles in Cuba.
- The U.S.S.R. thought that the heavily trafficked building in the center courtyard of the Pentagon was a top-secret meeting room and pointed nukes at it. Turns out it was a hot dog stand.

• The term "Third World Country" does not mean poor; it refers to a country that was not aligned with either the U.S./First World or U.S.S.R./Second World during the Cold War.

• America sent Romania 20,000 Bibles, which the Romanians subsequently turned into toilet paper because they had a shortage.

• In the 1940s, Hollywood starlet Hedy Lamarr invented a new technology to stop Nazis from jamming Navy torpedoes, but the idea was rejected until 1962 and implemented during the Cold War. Her frequency-hopping technology is also the basis for modern Bluetooth.

• The most powerful air raid sirens ever built (during the Cold War) were powered by a 180-horsepower Chrysler V-8 engine, were nearly 12 feet long, and were rumored to be so powerful that they could start fires and turn fog into rain.

• During the Cold War, maps distributed in the U.S. displayed distorted proportions to make the U.S.S.R. and its allies seem larger, closer and more "menacing." "Bridge of Spies" arrives on Blu-ray(tm) Combo Pack and Digital HD February 2, featuring four revealing documentaries about the making of the film and its historical background.

Help! I've Had A Car Accident!

(NAPSA)-If you are involved in one of the 7 million traffic crashes reported annually, you know that getting in a car accident can be extremely stressful and make you feel helpless. You numbly check that everyone on board is okay, your mind racing as you try to sort out what will get you safely back on the road.

While you can't eliminate the stress and inconvenience of a car accident, you can reduce it by following these three tips learned from leading insurance organizations: Take immediate action, report the accident and have your vehicle properly repaired by a qualified shop that will perform a complete, safe and quality repair. About 65 percent of vehicles involved in traffic crashes will require repairs.

Take immediate action
• Calmly assess the situation. Is anyone injured? Is there broken glass, fire, smoke or other potential hazards?

• Call 911 to report injuries and the accident.
• If no one is injured and your vehicle is drivable, move your car to a safe place and turn on your hazard lights. Otherwise, leave your car where it is.

Report the accident
• If other drivers are involved, exchange insurance and other information, including contact information, vehicle make and model, license plate number and witness information.
• Get a copy of the police report, which may be required to file a claim.
• Call the number on your insurance card to report the accident and file a claim with your insurance company. Be sure to get your claim number.

Have your vehicle properly repaired
• If your vehicle needs a repair to make it drivable, do your homework to identify a collision repair shop near the accident-whether that's home or elsewhere.
• If the vehicle is not drivable and you are far away from home, you shouldn't expect insurance to pay for towing or shipping it to your house.

When it comes to investing the time to find a qualified repair facility, people do more research to buy a TV. Fortunately, there is a way to find a collision repair shop with updated training and technicians who have the knowledge to properly fix your vehicle; one that's more dependable than broad online searches or referrals from friends and family-since not all shops are trained in today's latest repair methods and vehicle technologies.

Gold Class® shops are designated by I-CAR®, an independent not-for-profit organization focused on improving the quality and safety of auto collision repair for the ultimate benefit of the consumer. Gold Class shops employ trained specialists who have undergone rigorous annual training.

Whether you're at home or out of town, you can find a Gold Class shop at www.GoldClass.com/locator. All you need is the local zip code.

At the repair shop, service personnel should tell you:
• How their technicians make the right decisions for a safe repair
• How they find hidden damages that others might not see
• How they decide which parts to repair and which to replace.

If you also need a rental vehicle, choosing a Gold Class shop may get you back into your vehicle sooner and reduce the time you need your rental car. An Enterprise Rent-A-Car report found that customers using the country's top 500 Gold Class facilities needed 31 percent less rental car time than the national industry average-and that can save you money.

When you're in an accident, confidently find a collision repair shop whose technicians are trained to perform complete, safe and quality repairs. Go to www.GoldClass.com/locator to find a Gold Class® shop.

It's important to remember the three key tips if you are involved in a car accident: Take immediate action, report the accident and do your homework to get your vehicle repaired by a qualified shop that will perform a complete, safe and quality repair. Visit www.GoldClass.com/locator.
