City Lights to screen silent classic 'Dr. Jekyll'

The silent film classic "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," along with musical accompaniment by the Texas band The Invincible Czars, will be screened at City Lights Cinemas on Monday, June 12, at 6 p.m.

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde", one of the first truly great horror films, helped revolutionize cinematic effects.

Accompanying the film will be the Austin Texas band The Invincible Czars coming to town to provide the films score live.

It is often misstated that 1927's The Jazz Singer was the first sound picture. That's not even remotely true. Thousands of sound films had been made before then, traversing the American landscape with roadshows to get people interested in the technology.

Audiences? They hated it. They viewed filmgoing as something completely different than what we know it as today. Back then, cinema was a participation event.

Watching a silent film with a live musician takes the audience beyond just presenting a score to a film.

The musicians are watching the audience just as much as the film itself. They take cues from the audience, watching to see how each scene and musical choice affects them.

If a scare doesn't work the first time around, they'll make the next moment 10 times creepier. If a joke falls flat, the next one will be punctuated with a hilarious sound effect.

Silent film isn't a passive artform, and they are never actually silent.

"It's a rare moment when you get to instantly alter what Hollywood is presenting to you through the conduit of a masterful set of musicians," said Jared Anderson of City Lights. "It's film. It's theater. It's music. It's art. It's every piece of artistic expression combined into one beautiful, communal experience.

"It's cinema at its best." The Invincible Czars have performed at hundreds of these shows across the country over the years and they take silent cinema to a whole new level.

"They've got a full band, live sound effects — the whole works," said Anderson. "It's an extraordinary experience."

Tickets for "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" are currently available at City Lights Cinemas or online at citylightscinemas.com.

Tickets are $15 for adults, $10 for members, and $5 for students.

Acupuncture workshop for 'Aging Well' at LCC

Join local acupuncturist, Patricia Immel, M.A.O.M., L.Ac. to learn what this fascinating, effective and safe medicine can do for you.

She will be presenting at Lane Community College Florence Center on Tuesday, June 13, from 11 a.m. to noon as part of PeaceHealth Peace Harbor Medical Center's Aging Well series.

"You have an innate capacity to heal. Stress, injury, trauma, and illness can strain that capacity. Acupuncture works to strengthen you by stimulating vitality and circulation, calming and balancing your nervous system, and supporting healthy immune function," said Immel. Acupuncture is gaining popularity as many people are now using this traditional practice to help them recover from injury, illness, stress-related conditions and improve their quality of health and life.

Many elite medical centers such as the Mayo Clinic, Duke University Medical Center, and the University of California-San Francisco now offer acupuncture.

Additionally, the World Health Organization is an international proponent of acupuncture for a wide range of health concerns and diseases including chronic pain, depression and post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD).

The United States armed forces utilize acupuncture to help military personnel and their families recover from war-related conditions.

Medics are trained to administer simple treatments in the field to help ease pain, anxiety, insomnia, depression and PTSD.

The Veteran's Administration recognizes acupuncture as an effective treatment and a way to decrease the need for medications for many Veterans.

At Wellspring Clinic, Immel offers a variety of acupuncture treatment options including private, personalized treatment sessions and Points of Grace community acupuncture.

Together with Dr. Mark Immel, naturopathic physician, they are dedicated to inspiring and supporting people in their quest for a healthier, happier life utilizing natural medicine, wisdom and compassion.

Wellspring Clinic is located at 1845 Highway 126, Suite H in Florence and can also be contacted at 541-902-8860.
